Firemen’s Parade Kicks Off Summer Fun in Mahopac

The Mahopac Volunteer Fire Department’s annual dress parade brought residents of all ages onto Route 6 last Thursday, as steamy weather didn’t deter anyone from showing appreciation to those who serve their community. The parade marked the beginning of the annual carnival held at the fire department headquarters last week, with rides, games, and plenty of good food being offered to residents last weekend and then again this weekend, from July 16-18.

Funds for Police Merger Study Remain Up in the Air

By David Propper

Despite applying for a state grant several months ago, money for a feasible study into a countywide police merger are still in question, with Putnam County and local officials seeking other options to fund the study requested by the Town of Carmel.

Deputy County Executive Bruce Walker said in an interview that a possible plan is for the county to put an RFP (Request for Proposal) out immediately to the bidding process in order to get the actual expense of a police merger study. Once that cost estimate is determined, municipalities with police departments could decide if they want to take part in the study, in which they would pay for a share of the cost.

But Carmel Supervisor Ken Schmitt, in an interview, wasn’t as committed to that new plan of sending out an RFP, noting he and his town board haven’t had enough time to consider the proposal. Schmitt said that option requires further discussion on everyone’s part.

“Don’t think a conversation in the parking lot of the county building (with Walker) really qualifies for a discussion where we can have an understanding or agreement on how we’re going to move forward with that,” Schmitt said.

Proposing a study to explore merging all police agencies into one countywide force got started last March, when Carmel officials sent a letter to the county asking it to begin a process that would weigh the benefits and detractions of consolidating all police departments, including the sheriff’s office, into one.

Carmel and Kent each have a police department with full-time officers, while Brewster and Cold Spring each have a department with part-time officers. The sheriff’s department controls the rest of the county, while assisting the other
Brewster Teenager Found After Reported Missing

By David Propper

An exasperated search for a Brewster teenager came to a fortunate conclusion when Diego Alberto Salazar was safely found in Brewster Height Woods Friday morning, according to the Putnam County Sheriff’s Office.

The 19-year-old, who is severely autistic, was spotted by a New York State Police helicopter crew, at about 8:24 a.m. with boots on the ground confirming that it was in fact Salazar, according to the release. He was about half-mile northwest of his Allen Road home in Brewster Heights.

Salazar, who has other health issues that require medication, was found missing around noon Thursday afternoon.

Once his family called the sheriff’s office at 5 p.m., a massive search was underway.

A command post was set up at the Putnam County Savings Bank along Route 6 in Brewster and then relocated at the Brewster Fire Department with more than 80 first responders from New York and Connecticut involved in the effort. Search dogs were also used when scouring the wooded area between Salazar’s home and Route 6.

When found after missing for almost 24 hours, Salazar didn’t appear injured and was conscience. He was transported to Putnam Hospital Center in Carmel to be evaluated before going home.

Public Hearing Set for Proposed Garrison Fire District

By Janine Bowen

The Philipstown town board has set a public hearing for the consideration of forming a Garrison Fire District, but not without a bit of debate.

According to Supervisor Richard Shea, the town has been discussing the idea of dissolving the Garrison Fire Protection District and creating a fire district for years. The hope is to have the proposed fire district up and running by January 1, but the timing of the public hearing caused a bit of contention among board members.

Two separate public hearings, one that will discuss forming the fire district and another that will dissolve the current fire protection district, are set for August 19, but trustee Nancy Montgomery wanted to wait until September to hold the hearings, as many people are often away on vacation in August.

"People feel very disenfranchised when boards hold meetings when there’s a known lull in the town," she said.

Ultimately the board decided that they would keep the August date for the hearing, but agreed to keep the comment period open until September. In addition, they noted that people can come to a meeting to speak about the proposed fire district at any time, even if the topic is not on the agenda and they may also submit their opinions in writing.

“I think you very often get a much more considerate opinion when people sit down and put a pen to paper rather than standing up in a public meeting,” said Shea.

The public hearing will begin at 7 p.m. on August 19.

Ask the Doctor

Christos Stavropoulos, MD, FACS

Chief, Thoracic Surgery Division
Director, Lung Cancer Program,
Cancer Treatment & Wellness Center
Northern Westchester Hospital
nwncancercenter.org

Q: Could I benefit from lung cancer screening?

A: The Low-Dose CT screen for lung cancer is a new form of traditional CT (computed tomography) scan. It uses a very low dose of radiation to provide unique 3-D information about the lungs, detecting even smaller lung cancers called nodules. Catching lung cancer early, when it’s smallest, has the most impact on prognosis and survival. Proof is that the LDCT Scan is reducing lung cancer deaths by 20 percent.*

If you meet each of these criteria, the screening, which is conducted at Northern Westchester Hospital (NWH), could potentially save your life:

- You are between 55 and 74 years old;
- You have a smoking history of 30 pack years, meaning, you smoke (or smoked) one pack daily for 30 years, two packs daily for 15 years, or three packs daily for 10 years;
- You currently smoke or quit within the past 15 years;
- You have no symptoms of lung cancer.

Q: Should I be screened if I feel fine?

A: If you meet the criteria, absolutely. Early-stage lung cancer usually presents no symptoms. Here’s why: The lung is a relatively large organ. Now picture a marble (the nodule) floating within a big balloon. For the marble to have a noticeable impact, it must get bigger. Only when that marble becomes the size of an acorn or an orange, do symptoms develop. That’s why screening is vitally important.

Q: Can I afford the advanced LDCT screening?

A: The screening is covered by Medicare and most commercial insurers. If you meet the criteria, and don’t have commercial insurance or Medicare, NWH can help—with many payment options and below-average pricing. If you can benefit from the screening, we make sure you get it.

Q: What steps should I take?

A: If you think you meet the criteria, ask your primary care physician about ordering an LDCT. If you don’t have a referring doctor, NWH’s nurse practitioner will determine your eligibility and possibly order an LDCT. NWH is going the extra mile to make this potentially life-saving screening 100 percent accessible to everyone who needs it.

Hearing for Large Gathering Permits Produces More Questions

By Janine Bowen

Philpstown residents have more questions than answers following Thursday’s public hearing regarding a proposed law that would require permits for large gatherings.

According to the proposed law, people or organizations holding an event with more than 100 attendees would need to obtain an event permit from the town while an event that would have at least 250 attendees would require a mass gathering permit. Supervisor Richard Shea explained the proposed law is not meant to restrict events, but rather ensure that fundraisers and parties can be held legally with safety measures in place. However, residents are confused by what will and will not need a permit.

An event permit would need to be obtained only if an event is fee-based while a mass gather permit would be necessary anytime an event has more than 250 people, according to the proposed law. Still, residents were confounded about what events actually qualify as fee-based. One woman noted political parties often hold fundraisers that request donations but the event does not actually require a fee to attend while another resident noted that a permit requirement for a non-profit fundraiser would add difficult costs to each event that would require higher fundraising goals to meet expenses. Resident and pastor Tim Greco questioned whether or not his church, which holds barbecues for its congregation of more than 250 people, would need to get a permit for each event, which could become costly.

Town board members stated they might have to revisit the law with clarifications that would state that for-profit organizations would need to obtain the event permit while non-profit organizations would not.

Under the proposed laws, events that obtain a permit would be required to have a fire truck on site throughout the event in order to ensure safety, but residents again questioned why this would be necessary. Some were concerned that the requirement would tie up emergency vehicles and personnel in the event of a real emergency while others disliked the idea of needing emergency vehicles at their parties.

Trustee Nancy Montgomery explained that the intent of the law is not to require emergency vehicles at large family gatherings but rather to ensure safety at established Philipstown locations that possess site plan approval as a party venue, the town should set a limit to the number of people allowed to attend an event, the town should set limits to the decibel level allowed to come from a DJ’s sound system at certain times of the day. "It may not matter how large the (sound) system is if the noise is very loud and is able to travel and there's nothing in between that property and a neighbor's property to mitigate that impact," he said.

Montgomery explained this law is intended to help mitigate impact as well as keep members of the hospitality industry interested in the town. She noted that former venue, Dockside, left Philipstown because there were complaints from residents about the noise from bands that were booked, so this law would create a system that could placate both neighbors and venues. "Business owners just will not open a business here if (complaints) continue," said Montgomery. "We have to decide is that the kind of town we're going to live in where we're going to get off the train and go to bed and there's nothing happening and no events and you can't have your beautiful wedding here because we can't support it."
Putnam IDA Checks Off Tax Abatements for Butterfield Project

By David Propper

Though the groundbreaking for the Butterfield redevelopment project came last Wednesday, developer Paul Guillaro and Butterfield Realty LLC had reason to rejoice the day before when the Putnam County Industrial Development Agency (PCIDA) unanimously approved to lift mortgage-recording taxes and sales tax from two of the project’s buildings.

The July 7 meeting in Carmel, led by PCIDA chairman Richard Ruchala, confirmed the Village of Cold Spring would lose about $7,500 and the Town of Philipstown would lose double that at $15,000 in mortgage-recording taxes. Meanwhile the county, not the local municipalities, would lose the sales tax money made from those two commercial buildings since the county doesn’t share sales tax. The deal lasts for five years, Ruchala said.

Real property tax abatements weren’t requested by Guillaro, with Ruchala stating during the meeting the developer was “adamant” he would not be seeking that relief. Ruchala said the net revenue going toward the community would be about $431,000, all while eliminating an “eye sore.”

While most tax abatements are done without much of a whisper from the public or even local officials, three village representatives—trustee Marie Early and former trustees Stephanie Hawkins and Matt Francisco—attended the meeting to address concerns before the abatements were granted.

Early, in remarks that lasted almost ten minutes, said her concern was with the property tax monies that village is set to receive. She said because Guillaro promised not to try to lower property taxes, she recommended the final agreement disallow Guillaro or the PCIDA to grieve property taxes or Fireman’s Service Award.

Hawkins added the fact that the tax revenue could be grieved is a “meaningful concern.”

Francisco stressed he wasn’t an “alarmist” or against development, but wanted to ensure the details of the legal documents were clear and a benefit to the village.

Ruchala noted the negative impact on the village is the lost of mortgage-recording taxes, but the property tax revenue makes it worthwhile for the local municipalities. Ruchala assured, “You are getting something of value placed.”

Quick Reversal Leads to School Resource Officer at Haldane

By David Propper

After originally planning to provide a Special Patrol Officer to the Haldane School District, Putnam County reversed course and is now aiming to place a School Resource Officer inside the district’s high school instead.

Deputy County Executive Bruce Walker said the county executive administration and sheriff’s office recommended the county provide an SRO, taking the deputy position that was allocated to be stationed on the western side of Putnam starting in October and instead have that position become an SRO, starting over the summer.

Overall, an SRO cost more than an SPO because the SRO is a county employee that receives benefits while an SPO is typically a retired law enforcement officer at a lower rate.

Commissioner of Finance, Bill Carlin, is working on the numbers in order to find the additional money to get the officer the training over the summer and stationed at the high school by September, Walker said.

“It’s important for the school district and it’s really important to the overall operation, particularly on the western side of the county were we recognize Route 9 is really a drug corridor in Peekskill and Poughkeepsie and Haldane is obviously right in the middle of that,” Walker said.

Haldane is obviously right in the middle of that,” Walker said.

Protective Services Committee chairman and legislator Roger Gross said having a police car outside the school building, which would only be the case if an SRO was assigned, is a “big deterrent” to potential criminals.

One legislator against the move was Ginny Nacerino, who voiced “serious concerns” about doing an “about-face” from an SPO to an SRO.

Nacerino said the county implemented a program that has been tested and proved to be a success using SPOs, and that the county has acknowledged it can’t continue to sustain the SRO program as it is. She added one previous rationale was replaced by a completely opposite rationale as to why a SRO would be assigned to the Haldane schools.

“We’ve been waffling on our mindset is what I’m saying,” Nacerino said.

Walker said some legal capabilities between an SPO and SRO warranted the recommendation the county has put forth to the legislature. The county executive administration had just talked with Sheriff Don Smith and Undersherriff Peter Convery for two hours the day before the meeting, Walker said, which led to the reversal.

Legislator Barbara Scuccimarra, who represents the district where the school is located, said, “I think every high school except Haldane has an SRO and I know they’re coming in late in the game, but don’t penalize Haldane because they came in late in the game,” with Nacerino responding, “Please don’t allude to that,” adding legislators should be vetting this again because of the sudden change and fiscal impact.

“‘My concerns are the fiscal concerns of how we’re going to sustain this program, which we said we were moving a different direction to defray some of those costs,” Nacerino said.

“We can’t keep going down this path just like we can’t keep going down all the other paths we continue to spend years on trying to remedy things.”

Elevate Event Lounge
Yorktown

By Neal Rentz

The Front Street location of Elevate Event Lounge has long been a site to host events.

Last August, Mahopac resident Chris Vernia changed the format of the business, which was formerly Bounce the Party Place, in which Vernia was a member of the partnership of Bounce and purchased the facility outright last year.

“I’ve actually been here five years,” he noted. Bounce, which opened in 2009, was geared toward parties for young children.

The name Elevate Event Lounge came about following a “brainstorming session with the rest of my guys that work here,” Vernia said. “We want to take your event to the next level.”

The most common events held at the facility are Sweet 16, and Bat Mitzvah parties. It has also hosted a variety of other parties, including wedding anniversaries and communion and confirmation parties.

“We do really do everything,” he said. “And we called it the Event Lounge because it’s not like a catering facility. It’s more like a lounge/nightclub, although we’re not open to the public. We’re doing nothing but private events.”

“Everything here is very sleek and modern,” said Vernia, who has been in the entertainment business for 27 years.

The main room is “customizable” with multi-colored lighting for the tables and walls, Vernia said, adding a bar is also available. “We’re really based on dancing,” he said. DJs or the live pop and rock band, Naked Soul, which performs a wide variety of genres, including “from classics to contemporary” can provide the music, he said.

Vernia said he is very happy with his business, “Because of my business, I don’t need to be in a retail strip mall,” he said. “Everybody’s closed at five o’clock on Friday and don’t come back until Monday at 9 a.m. All of my events are usually happening after 5 o’clock on Friday.”

Vernia said he received much gratification from his profession. There is “a lot of personal satisfaction,” he said. “I meet a lot of great people. I make friends with people from years and years ago.”

“I’m in a great business. We’re always at a party. We’re always making people smile. To me it’s the best business in the world,” Vernia added.

PV Library Seeking Voter Approval with No Transparency

The Putnam Valley Library’s Board of Trustees are looking to double the amount of funding they receive from taxpayers by putting a referendum on November’s ballot. Currently the Town has approved the Library’s 2015 budget of $278,307. At the Town Hall budget meeting there was no mention or request by the library for additional funds needed to provide more services to our community. If the referendum gets voted in at November’s election, the Town will no longer have any control of the amount of our taxes that are allocated to the Library’s annual budget. The Library’s budget and the amount of our taxes we pay for that budget will be out of control just like the Putnam Valley Central School District’s budget has been over the years. Currently the Library is not required to open its books to the Town for review. It is believed that they are sitting on a very large reserve at taxpayer’s expense. Will the Library reach the Putnam Valley Central School District’s tremendous budget of $48 million dollars? Will it slowly creep up from the $287,307 to a million dollars over the next few years similar to what had happened to the Mahopac’s Library budget which recently passed at the million dollar mark?

No one can dispute that the Library’s function in the community is vital and plays an important role to our residents. If the Library needs to implement improvements, they should be forthcoming and transparent at the budget meetings held at Town Hall. They should also be forthcoming and transparent as to the amount of reserves they are currently holding. To date, no one has been privy to that number, my guesstimate is somewhere in the vicinity of $4 million dollars.

As over-taxed residents of Putnam Valley, we have to put an end or a limit on how much more we will endure. We must have oversight into the Library’s budget. If this come up for voters in November VOTE NO.

LUMBER & BUILDING MATERIALS

revealed a new United States Post Office is set to be located at the redevelopment, which residents in the area voiced was a need in the village.

The groundbreaking came after dozens of meetings, hundreds of public comments, and a well-documented ongoing debate over development in the small village that Putnam County residents, whether they were from Carmel or Brewster, knew all about.

County and local officials in support of the project reflected and revealed as concrete construction gets started with the demolition of the old building scheduled for later this summer.

For the past several years, when County Executive MaryEllen Odell drove from Carmel into Cold Spring, she said her first thought looking at the decrepit old hospital site, was “ghetto.” The reputation of Cold Spring tourism deserved better, Odell said, than a deserted building.

“It looked like a ghetto in the middle of such a beautiful area,” Odell said. “It was once the heartbeat of the western part of the county.”

Odell called the opposition to the project, a “vocal minority,” of residents who “lack vision,” adding, “those individuals actually lack being able to understand that other people than themselves have needs. I think most of it ends up in the category of self-agenda.”

So far, a senior center is set to be located inside the new redevelopment with the Putnam County Legislature sending a letter of intent to lease space at Butterfield for it. Odell said while the county’s focus is on the senior center, if residents begin voicing a need for additional county services, then she would go to the legislature and ask that governing body for its support.

“The most outspoken of the legislators for Butterfield, Barbara Scuccimarra, stood up to briefly speak during the ceremony and the first words out of her mouth were “pinch me!” Scuccimarra, like many residents in Cold Spring and Philipstown were skeptical how long it would take the project to actually reach the finish line.

Scuccimarra, who has been a vocal advocate for a new senior center for western county seniors, recalls several years ago, “And that was so upsetting and we have lost a lot of seniors that never saw this so I was always like, ‘Oh my God, is this ever going to happen,’” Scuccimarra said. “But here it is.”

Former legislator Vincent Tamagna said he believes the project took as long as it did because of a lack of leadership from the village board during the several years this proposal was on the table. Tamagna said the village waterfront project, another proposal from Guillaro that brought some controversy, was finally completed because then-mayor Anthony Philips pushed forward with it.

Since Philips left office, Tamagna argued village mayors have not displayed similar leadership in order to get the new Butterfield project off the ground. Tamagna said the Butterfield redevelopment could have been completed sooner if a stronger advocate in the mayoral position existed. After Philips, Seth Gallagher and Ralph Falloon were the mayors to follow in his footsteps. Now, it’s Dave Merandy who is early into his first term.

Tamagna said thankfully, Guillaro had the tenacity and patience to move forward with the project, even though it was loudly maligned. When Tamagna was a legislator, he noted he didn’t have the support of fellow county lawmakers to bring an improved senior center to the western part of the county.

“We have a very active group of seniors that started showing up to meetings,” Tamagna said. “It seems like the more resistance we got through the planning process, the more it fueled the community to jump on the bandwagon and say, no we need this.”

Falloon, who was mayor for two years, said an initial mistake made by the village was not hiring an outside planning/engineering firm from the very beginning, considering the mass and size of the proposal. While he said the end result is a “home run,” it was a “painful” process for everyone involved.

Whenever a major vote or meeting was coming up, Falloon recalled several residents each week would approach him to ask about the project or give their opinion. It wasn’t rare to get a question every day. Now, with the project beginning construction, the chatter has died down, whether residents support it or not.

“I’m glad to see it over with whether you like it or not,” Falloon said. “I’m just glad it’s finished.”

Roger Ailes is honored for his donation of $500,000 toward at new senior center.
Super Heroes Training Camp at Kent Library

On July 3, in conjunction with the Town of Kent Independence Day celebration, the Kent Public Library hosted a Super Heroes Training Camp for all of the young super heroes in the area. Super heroes were encouraged to come in costume. Many of the costumes were created at the library the day before. Children tested their strength and agility with an obstacle course, weight lifting, sack race, ring toss, giant Jenga game, spoon race, and more. Supervisor Maureen Fleming and Putnam County Legislator Toni Addonizio came to encourage our young super heroes.
Blues Brothers Band Lead Singer at Arts on the Lake

The Summer Concert Series continues at 7 p.m. at Arts on the Lake on Friday, July 17 as the American bluesman – think lead singer and front man of the original John Belushi/Dan Ackroyd Blues Brother Band - Jonny “The Rock and Roll Doctor” Rosch and Friends drop in to the Lake Carmel Arts Center for a musical evening to remember.

While listing all of Rosch’s credits would be an almost impossible task, suffice it to say the man, who sings and plays keyboard and harmonica, truly is a legend in his own time. Just to list a few credits, Rosch has played for Cyndi Lauper, Phoebe Snow, Tommy James and the Shondells, Joan Jett, Alice Cooper, John Oates, John Sebastian, Richie Sambora and Paul Shaffer.

Suzanne Cadégène reviewed Rosch and Friends’ June 1st performance at the Paramount Hudson Valley Theater for Ellmore Magazine and gave the group a definite two thumbs up.

“Rosch . . . has powerful, husky vocals which deliver funk, blues and soul so smoothly it’s like cool hand on a hot throat—it makes you shiver, and you’re so grateful as it slides right on down,” Cadégène wrote. “Slow and soulful, Rosch knocked the lyrics [of Sam Cooke’s “A Change Is Gonna Come”] out of the park, and threw in a wonderful, extended harp solo like a victory lap. The crowd whooped and hollered until the last few soft and sincere minutes, which brought a hush upon us all. If the objective of music is to touch our hearts, that song succeeded.”

This is a show you are not going to want to miss. As always, admission for the concert is pay-as-you-wish. Picnic food and refreshments will be available so pack up the family for some mid-July rock and roll fun at Arts on the Lake.

The Lake Carmel Arts Center is located at 640 Route 52. For a complete listing of summer classes, events and programs, visit the AotL website at www.artsonthelak.org or call (845) 228-2685.

During a tense July 8 Protective Services Committee meeting, Walker said the county has yet to receive grant money from New York State, which was applied through state Sen. Terrence Murphy’s office, and the county could be waiting for an extended period for that money to come through. Because of that holdup, Walker proposed starting a study on Aug. 1 using residents and workers within the county, citing “we do have a significant amount of expertise within the county.”

The county already has about completed four past studies, Walker said, dating back to the 1970s that could be referenced when discussing whether it is reasonable to have a countywide police force.

“We can do a fifth study if we think it’s necessary,” Walker said. “Or we could rely on the four and pull the right people in the room and let’s hash this out.”

Schmitt said a true independent study from an outside consulting firm would yield the best results. While there are residents and workers within the county that can lend valuable input, Schmitt said a study done solely within the county could lead to “tainted opinions and preconceived thoughts.”

By staying only within county borders, Schmitt argued, “You will never assemble that group of people…that will be totally objective and independent with their thought process without politics or favoritism involved in it.”

“We all know with politics it never ends well because politics in Putnam County is horrible,” Schmitt said. “I’ve lived through it for eight years now, I understand it and I see where it goes.”

Walker responded he’s hopeful residents and county workers asked to be part of the study could take an “altruistic approach” to discussing a merger without putting personal agendas first. He also said a possible police consolidation is only one of numerous issues within the emergency service community that could be looked at, taking a broader approach to the study.

“This is a much bigger issue than just police consolidation and I guess we could just ignore it, but that’s not my choice,” Walker said.

Schmitt further questioned if the county is committed to actually having a feasible study done, and even went as far to say he can’t believe the grant money from New York State is tied in bureaucratic knots. He challenged county officials to let Carmel officials know where they actually stood in getting the money for merger study.

“I feel like it’s something that should be moved forward with but I’m just not getting that feeling that the county is really working toward that,” Schmitt said in an interview. “I just think it’s an effort that needs to be a stronger effort.”

Become a citizen scientist and join the Kent Conservation Advisory Committee (KCAC) for its first annual Butterfly Count on Saturday, July 18th from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The count will start at the Nimham Multiple Use Area on Gipsy Trail Road. Those who join in on the count will actually be supporting the North American Butterfly Association’s (NABA) efforts while adding to Kent’s Natural Resource Inventory by finding as many butterflies as possible.

Okay, just what is a butterfly count? Well, it’s much the same as a bird count except participants search for and count butterflies at certain sites for a limited period of time. The annual reports are then compiled by the NABA and can help determine the geographical distribution and relative population sizes of the species counted. By comparing results over a period of years, scientists and others can monitor changes in butterfly populations and study the effects of weather and habitat change on butterflies. The NABA and other interested organizations can then develop plans to protect butterflies from extinction.

Why butterflies? Because butterflies can actually represent just how well – or not – Mother Nature is doing. The NABA reports that butterflies quickly react to changes in their environment. A decline in butterfly populations should be treated as an early warning sign for additional wildlife loss. So counting butterflies is much like taking Mother Nature’s pulse.

Butterfly habitat, meadows where wild growing plants such as milkweed and violets, each contributors to a butterfly’s life cycle, have, in fact, declined. That and the unrestrained use of pesticides are, according to NABA experts, two of the major threats to the butterfly population.

Hike leader and KCAC Chairwoman Beth Herr will compile butterfly sightings and look for butterfly eggs, caterpillars, and chrysalides.

"Participants will learn about the habits and habitats of these brilliant insects, visiting four different meadows by caravan. Of course, we may well enjoy seeing other summer delights which are likely to be found in the tall grass fields and forest edges," Herr said.

‘Counters’ should be prepared to stand and watch for periods of time. Anyone wishing to bring a pair of close-focus binoculars may do so but a pair of eyes is actually quite sufficient. Herr suggests participants wear sturdy shoes and long pants and she advises all to bring water and lunch but please leave the family dog at home for this outing. Children over six years are welcome.

Registration is required for the count so please contact Herr at (845) 228-5635. In case of rain - when butterflies wisely choose to stay under cover - the count will be postponed until Sunday, July 19, same time, same place.

For further information on butterflies and butterfly counts, visit the NABA website at: http://www.naba.org/. For more information on events sponsored by the KCAC or to read their acclaimed Nature Almanac, visit their website at: http://kentcac.info/wp.

When we moved to Westchester in the early 1970s, our home had a curious architectural twist: the front and the back were switched, as is frequently the case with 18th century farmhouses.

At some point, the previous owners opted for privacy over curb appeal and hid the grand front porch and expansive lawn behind a tall hedge and took to parking their cars in an unpaved half-circle in the rear of the house, entering through the back door beneath a towering maple tree.

We chose to continue to embrace the back of the house as our entrance, and spiffed it up accordingly. I dressed the driveway with fresh three-eighths of an inch crushed bluestone and built up low flower beds on either side from stone. The sloping walkway leading to the front door was replaced by broad, bluestone steps. The largest project of all, however, was installing a large patio that replaced the patchy shaded lawn underneath the tree.

The paving material, of course, would have to be brick for two reasons: it’s the easiest material for a do-it-yourselfer to accommodate and, I believe, it offers the warmest and most informal texture to a country landscape. Personally, I have favored brick as a surface since my days at William & Mary in Colonial Williamsburg and I traversed the uneven brick-lined walkways there daily.

For those of us who live in regions with sub-freezing temperatures in winter, a brick patio laid on sand can be an excellent choice for an outdoor space. The small gaps between the bricks and the grains of sand allow for slight movement when any moisture in the ground expands or contracts with the change in temperature, unlike a more rigid surface, which may crack.

The first step was to cut away the old lawn, which was hardly a lawn at all in the deep shade of the maple, and dig a level space into the ground, deep enough to hit the more clay-like layer below. The step I didn’t take, but perhaps should have, was to rent a compactor to make this base truly level. Indeed, my patio would always have to be cut down, the patio still didn’t take, but perhaps should have, was to rent a compactor to make this base truly level. I opted for a standard running bond pattern where the edges of two bricks meet under the center of the bricks above them. Had I wished, I could have opted for many other patterns, such as herringbone, basket weave or radial designs. With a little ingenuity, a homeowner could even incorporate different sizes or colors of bricks to create a unique design.

As for me, the contrast between the red of the brick and the gray of the flag stones was intriguing enough, so I chose a simpler pattern to complement those colors. Besides, I didn’t want to get into the chore of complicated cuts in the brick. At the end, I swept a fine layer of sand in between the bricks, and I was done.

For the most part, the patio was perfect. The only flaw in the design is that the patio was on the north side of the house, so we always had to shovel snow since the sun would not melt it for us.

It took a summer’s worth of work for me to build the patio, but the end result was worth it. We had many years of outdoor dining and relaxing under the shade of that large maple, and when it eventually succumbed to disease and I was done.

Surging Hudson Valley Renegades Defeat Brooklyn, Batavia

By Monica D’Ippolito

Hudson Valley Renegades skipper, Tim Parenton peaked through the window of the team’s trailer at Dutchess Stadium Friday to see the outcome of the Renegades extra-innings thriller against the New York Mets affiliate, Brooklyn Cyclones.

“Well they told me about it,” Parenton said after the 12-inning, 6-5 win. “We got a window somewhere over here I could watch some of it out of. It was a bunt play to third.”

Parenton was tossed earlier in the 11th inning, after Jake Cronenworth was tagged out when he was accused of attempting to round first base. It was only the second time the skipper was ejected in a game; the first came nearly 15 years ago.

“The ump said that we made an intention to go to second base and I didn’t think so,” Parenton explained. “I mean he’s going to stick by his guns and I have to stick by my guns. I think it was a big play for us because it was our leadoff hitter. We had our two, three, four (guys) coming up. Anytime a manager argues enough to get kicked out, they think the play is critical.”

Despite the ejection, Hudson Valley rallied around their coach in the 12th, taking advantage of a throwing error to third, which allowed Cade Gotta to bring home the game-winning run.

“It’s been pretty good games against them,” Parenton said. “I mean you hate to see a game end like that because they played such a hard game, but we’ll take the win any way we can get it.”

Rookie Matt Dacey – making his first career start – recorded his first professional hit and got the Renegades on the board in the bottom of the first inning. His double sailed over to right center, allowing Michael Russell to score from first and gave the Renegades an early 1-0 lead.

The Cyclones scored a run in the top of the second and third innings, giving them the 2-1 advantage, but Dacey came up big once more in the bottom of the third. The Richmond product recorded his second career hit with another double, which brought in Russell, tying the game at two.

“It was great,” Dacey said of providing the first two runs of the game. “Especially for us to get on the board early in the first inning, especially at home we wanted to get that momentum rolling and get these fans behind us, so that definitely helped.”

Manny Sanchez gave Hudson Valley back the lead in the bottom of the fifth inning. His single brought in Cronenworth and Russell, while Gotta followed with a base hit that scored Dacey from third and extending the lead 5-2.

The top of the seventh inning was a mess for the Renegades. Zach Mathieu led off the inning with a homerun to deep left field off pitcher Justin McCalvin. Then, after McCalvin put to more runners on, Tucker Tharp broke his bat while hitting a slow grounder toward Dacey at third.

The broken bat may have affected Dacey’s approach, but the rookie bare handed the grounder and made an errant throw to first base, which allowed the two runs to score and tied the ball game up at five a piece. It was Dacey’s second error of the day.

“Emotions get the best of a guys for their first professional start as a player,” Parenton said of Dacey. “He DH’d for us (Thursday) night. We just want him to play hard, he’ll learn from that and you know it happens in professional baseball, you make physical errors all the time, just got to go out there and have fun and play the next day.”

Despite the fielding errors, and a few poor decisions on the bases, Dacey kept demonstrating his prowess at the plate, knocking a triple in the bottom of the second inning. The Cyclones decided to load the bases after the hit and ultimately got out of the inning with a timely double play.

Despite coming up empty in the first two extra innings of the contest, Hudson Valley came alive in the bottom of the 12th inning. Gotta led off with a single down the right side of the infield. Nic Wilson drew a walk from pitcher Nico Blank, putting runners at first and second. Angel Moreno followed with a nicely placed bunt down the third base line. Instead of making the throw to first, Brooklyn’s third baseman David Thompson tried getting the force out at third, but mishit, allowing Gotta to cross home plate and sealing the victory.

“We cooled off a little bit, but we kept swinging the bat,” Dacey said. “We had runners on, even in the extra innings we had runners on. We put pressure on their pitchers to make good pitches, and we put pressure on their defense to make plays. At the end they made one costly error and we were able to push one run across.”

Christopher Crisostomo took home the win for the Tampa Bay Rays Single A short season affiliate, while Blank was handed the loss for the Cyclones.

The win was the first of three in a four-game home stand. The Renegades also defeated the Miami Marlins affiliate, Bativa Muckdogs Saturday 5-3, and Sunday 14-6, while also playing again Monday.

Dacey, who went 3-5 with one run and two RBI Friday, continued his spectacular play over the weekend. The 21-year old lit up the score sheet and through Sunday’s game, recorded eight hits, four runs and 10 RBI, with a batting average of .500.

“I mean I couldn’t even tell you how antsy I was at the beginning of this game, especially with my first at bat, getting my first pro hit, it was awesome,” Dacey said. “And then my adrenaline was high, made some base running mistakes too, me and coach talked about it but I was just out there having fun. Was the first time out in the field in a long time so I was happy to be back out there.”

USA Soccer Heroines Not Alone in Female Athletic Exploits

So this was a week like no other when it comes to women's sports in the grand old U.S. of A. For even the most high and mighty ignoramus male in the country had to take note of the USA soccer team's sterling 5-2 win over Japan for the FIFA World Cup crown on Sunday, July 5th in Vancouver.

And then there was Michigan-born Serena Williams, who can no longer be denied her status as the greatest female player in tennis history, winning her eighth Wimbledon title this past Saturday, and snaring her 21st major crown in all. Former Ossining All-American Saniya Chong led the Pride to three Section 1 titles before leaving for UConn after the 2013 campaign, and when she bolted for hoops, nobody does it better than OSSINING, a program that has transcended not just Section 1, but every public school system in NYSPHSAA. It's insane to think that a Class AA basketball program like it is the rise of Steve Nash, the likes of Jalay Knowles, Shadine Samuels, Abby Squirrell, Steph Svoboda, Madison Strippoli, Cyan Scarduzio, Jenna Lividini and the rest of the immortal pack picking up the slack. Ossining's run may never be duplicated, for it is as great a string of triumph as any we've seen in this region.

And lest we not forget the Haldane girls run to their first-ever NYS Class C soccer championship last fall, behind recent grad Allie Monteleone, inarguably the greatest three-sport athlete in Blue Devil history, who also led the Haldane charge to a Section 1 hoops crown.

Last March we had a couple of near-misses, too, over at MAHOPAC where the Indians reached the first ever Section 1 lax championship game before falling to Suffern with All-American Kim Harker shattering every Indian scoring record ever created, career goals, career assists, season goals, goals in a game, most celebrations and what not. To boot, the Indians also appeared in their first Section 1 field hockey championship since they won the state title back in 2001, doing so with a quintet of seniors who won't soon be forgotten, including Sarah Quarto, Sarah Lilley, Jane Kasperian, Kelly Maxwell and Serena was surpassing Steffi, Martina, Monica and Chrissy as the greatest tennis player of all time, the ladies in our neck of the woods pretty much outdid themselves, too. And while many young gals across the country were inspired by their exploits, let's remember where it all starts; right here in our own backyard and on local fields throughout our great country. And with a new cast of characters taking center stage, don't be bashful about showing your support in 2015-16.

Remember, like the boys, girls just wanna have fun!
Ladies Go Gaga Over Sports!
2014-15 Was Year to Remember

Even before Team USA’s historic soccer win over Japan in the recent World Cup Championship, the local ladies from Ossining to Lakeland and Somers to Haldane were in to win it during the 2014-15 school year, plying their craft at a championship level and inspiring Section 1 sports fans with a brand of competition that continues to increase across the board... see Direct Rays.
