White Plains Budget Director Continues Plea for Mandate Relief

By Pat Casey

The City of White Plains 2015 to 2016 Proposed Budget was submitted to the Common Council on Monday evening.

Keeping within the tax cap of 1.65 percent for this year, White Plains has proposed and maintained a budget within State tax levy constraints for the fourth consecutive year and is yet to experience any relief from the State mandates that have kept most New York municipal budgets extremely tight.

The total General Fund Proposed Budget is $162.9 million, an increase of $2.2 million or 1.4 percent over last year. The total combined proposed budget is $179.1 million, an increase of $3 million or 1.7 percent.

The proposed Property Tax levy of $56.3 million is within the State tax levy cap by approximately $12,000 and would result in a tax rate of $200.74, an increase of $4.60 or 2.4 percent over last year. This means that with a median assessed value of $13,500, a White Plains homeowner would pay $62 more in City tax.

Sewer fees would also remain at 21 percent of the bill for water consumption.

Stressing the fact that White Plains has a stable financial base, Michael Genito, Budget Director, noted that the path to economic recovery continues slowly and incrementally, and has been constructed to maintain the city’s Aa1 credit rating with Moody’s Investors Service.

The real property tax levy remains the largest revenue generator. A small increase in the assessment roll (up $75,915 or 0.03 percent) provided by slightly more property tax revenue because of one apartment complex coming on the roll after PILOT payments, is an indicator why White Plains

White Plains Introduces Historic Preservation Law

By Pat Casey

The much anticipated and long-time coming White Plains Historic Preservation Law has been drafted and a copy was submitted to the Common Council at their April meeting on Monday night. The hope is to get the proposed legislation onto the public hearing schedule and onto the books later this year, perhaps as early as this summer.

When it became known late last spring that White Plains was considering an Historic Preservation Law, many updates were being made to preservation laws at the State level and the city was able to incorporate those updates into its current proposal by working with the State Historic Preservation Officer (SHIPO).

The new local law would take the form of an amendment to the White Plains Municipal Code by adding a Section 9-6 to be titled “Historic Preservation.”

According to the draft, the intent is to make it a matter of public policy that the protection, enhancement and perpetuation of landmarks and historic districts are necessary to promote the cultural, economic, safety and general welfare of the public.

State Budget Elicits Varied Reactions From Area Legislators

By Martin Wilbur

“ ‘It’s very mixed,’ said Assemblyman Tom Abinanti (D-Greenburgh), ‘(There’s) some good, some not so good and some terrible.”

Key education changes include extending the period for tenure from three years to at least four years and requiring that teachers be rated as effective or highly effective for at least three of those years.

A redesigned evaluation plan is also in place combining student performance with teacher observations. Districts may use a standardized state measure or a state designed supplemental assessment. Observations will be done by principals and independent observers.

“This budget addresses two of the most fundamental and intractable issues that have vexed the state for generations—education and ethics,” Gov. Andrew Cuomo said in a statement released by his office following the budget’s approval.

“When it comes to education, the budget we approved will transform our school system in comprehensive ways. The reforms we have included will move us to an education system that rewards results, addresses challenges and demands accountability.”

The ethics reform package will see new disclosure requirements for legislators. Also, Assemblyman David Buchwald’s (D-White Plains) pension forfeiture proposal that would strip public officials of their state pension if convicted of a corruption-related offense was included. A second passage is needed by the legislature before it can go to voters in 2017.

“When I was first elected to the state Assembly two years ago, some seasoned legislators said there’s no way this will make progress,” Buchwald said. “Thanks to a concerted effort on my part and many great partners, we’re on the threshold of real meaningful changes that will improve ethics in state government.”

Abinanti, who has been critical of many of Cuomo’s policies, praised the 6 percent across-the-board increase in education spending, which resulted in the additional aid. That pushes state spending on education to about $23.5 billion and includes a roughly 60 percent reduction in the Gap Elimination Adjustment.

He also applauded the $1 billion from the $5 billion settlement money that will be put toward the construction of the new Tappan Zee Bridge.

However, Abinanti blasted many of the education policy changes that he said will make it more difficult for city school districts to attract and retain quality teachers.

The assemblyman also bristled that Cuomo sought to have greater disclosure requirements for legislators but no additional safeguards for the executive branch.

State Sen. George Latimer was critical on the education reforms, which tied policy change with the budget. He called using money as a threat to districts that need the money “a bad way to make change” and blasted the loss of local control.

“I believe all this change in education is built on a faulty presumption—that is the presumption that public education in New York is failing,” said Latimer who voted against the Senate bill. “I do not believe that.”

Assemblywoman Sandy Galef (D-Ossining) called the budget “a compromise,” pointing out there were some policy decisions that didn’t survive.

She said she didn’t think the final ethic reforms and campaign finance reforms in the budget were strong enough.

Galef agreed with her colleagues that the state Education Department and Board of Regents should be responsible for crafting a better evaluation system for teachers.

Meanwhile, Buchwald and state Sen. Terrence Murphy (R-Yorktown) were the most upbeat about the new budget.

Buchwald was pleased with the sharp increase in state education aid and the $50 million increase in funding to repair local roads.

Murphy said he was happy the budget contains a $12 million increase to combat opioid addiction, a $200 million boost for new clean water and infrastructure and the extra $50 million for road improvements.

As for the controversial education bill that Murphy voted in favor of, he said “I joined my colleagues in rejecting the Governor’s evaluation proposals for our teachers and shifted this responsibility to professionals at the state Education Department with the goal of reducing standardized testing and returning local control to our schools.”

A transition lies in store for White Plains Hospital this year as current CEO Jon Schandler retires and turns the reigns over to Hospital President Susan Fox.

The two have been working together for the past five years, a power team, plotting a course through medical technology and healthcare market changes to make White Plains Hospital a leader in the New York Metropolitan area.

White Plains Hospital is in the top 5 percent nationwide.

Schandler, who joined the Hospital 38 and a half years ago, remembers that when he came to White Plains in the early 1980s the city was a huge vacant lot.

“Downtown White Plains was leveled,” he recalls. “I have worked through two, maybe three Renaissances of the city. You almost cannot compare the White Plains then to what it is now.”

When it comes to medical technology, Schandler said much has changed over the years. Referring to innovations in diagnostic imaging and digital networks that made access to patient records easier to access, Schandler said implementation of such new technology made White Plains Hospital a leader. “While other hospitals in the area were closing their doors, White Plains was headed into prime time,” he said.

Schandler also credits the hospital’s Board. “There was a lot of collaboration with the Board to create strategy,” Schandler said. They are dedicated to making the hospital the best it can be and were solid in backing the hiring of good people.

“In the late 1970s and into the 1980s, the best doctors were focused on New York City, but that was changing because people wanted to work in their communities,” schandler added. The other element he credits is a good philanthropy program. “Fundraising is a very large source of creating capital for us. Everything at White Plains Hospital is up-to-date and new. Nothing at this hospital is old.”

Partnerships also play a key role in White Plains Hospital’s success. “We would not have been as successful as we were without Stellaris Health Network,” Schandler said.

In August of 1996, HealthStar Network was formed by Northern Westchester Hospital (Mt. Kisco) and White Plains Hospital Center. In March 1997, Lawrence Center (Bronxville) joined the network and in October 1997, Phelps Memorial Hospital Center (Sleepy Hollow) joined. HealthStar Network, Inc. began operating under the trade name of Stellaris Health Network in 2001.

Together, the organizations set an agenda for working together to accomplish goals that, alone would be more difficult to achieve, including cost reduction initiatives such as supply chain management of consolidated business functions such as joint insurance procurement programs and the implementation of a state-of-the-art information system and clinical initiatives such as the sponsorship of an Emergency Medical Service (EMS).

In January 2014, Stellaris transitioned into a Shared Services Organization.

“Everything at White Plains Hospital is up-to-date and new. Nothing at this hospital is old.”

The next five-year plan is a continuation of what we have been doing,” Fox said. “We will be enhancing the hospital’s role in the community, building on tertiary care and recruiting more healthcare professionals. With the Montefiore partnership patients will not have to leave White Plains to get the care they need. They will be able to find it right here.”

With enhanced technology, a new cancer care center, more operating rooms, patients will not have to look to New York City for advanced care.

Fox also noted that White Plains Hospital has plans to provide single-patient rooms only and will be expanding geographically with satellite offices. There is already one office in New Rochelle and a second planned for Armonk.

Schandler says he intends to read the over 100 books he has put aside when he retires and he plans to spend time with his grandchild. But he will continue to play a role in a fund-raising capacity.

Happy to have worked with Fox for the past five years to create a strategy, his advice to her is to “keep on working with all the parties.”

The act would protect and enhance the historic and architecturally and culturally significant buildings, structures, sites, monuments, streetscapes and neighborhoods, which represent distinctive elements of the City’s historic, architectural, and cultural heritage; Foster understanding of and civic pride in the accomplishments of the past; Protect and enhance the City’s attractiveness, which supports and stimulates the local economy; and Insure the harmonious, orderly, and efficient growth and development of the City.

The proposal calls for establishment of the White Plains Historic Preservation Commission, with members appointed by the Mayor and approved by the Common Council.

To qualify a member has to be a resident of the City of White Plains and have an interest in historic preservation and/or architecture. It is preferred that members have a background in archeology, architecture, arts, education, history, law, real estate, urban planning, or a related field.

Responsibilities of the Commission would include making recommendations to the Mayor and Common Council regarding new or amended local laws or other regulations that the Commission believes would further the goals of this local law, as well as making proposals for the acquisition of interests in real property and proposed demolitions.

The Commission would prepare reports and recommendations in response to referrals or requests from the Common Council, and maintain an inventory of designated historic landmarks or districts within the City.

The Commission would conduct surveys and prepare maps, reports and recommendations regarding historic preservation policies, regulations and local law, and review applications for alterations to or demolition of local landmarks or districts.

Recommendation for the designation of local landmarks or historic districts would be an important role of the Commission.

The draft suggests that an individual property could be identified as a local landmark if it possesses special character, historic, aesthetic interest or value as part of the cultural, political, economic or social history of the city, region, state or nation; or derives its primary significance from architectural or artistic distinction or historical importance; or identifies with persons or events significant in local, state, or national history; or is a cemetery that derives its primary importance from graves of persons of transcendent importance, from age, from distinctive design features, or from association with historic events.

An historic landmark might also be the birthplace or grave of an historical figure of outstanding importance or a building that embodies the distinguishing characteristics of an architectural style or is the work of a noted designer, architect, or builder.

The Commission might designate a group of properties as an historic district if the majority of properties meet one or more of the criteria for designation of an individual landmark. The proposal also suggests that districts may be geographic or thematic in nature.

The document, which will be made available for public review, also contains an outline for several procedures regarding applications, renovations, sales, maintenance and other processes relating to activities within the proposed law.

White Plains Introduces Historic Preservation Law
Officials, Police Urge for More Traffic Enforcement at Rail Crossings

By Janine Bowen

Stricter enforcement of traffic laws and levying heftier fines for drivers who ignore railroad crossing warnings was recommended by a group of local, state and federal representatives last Tuesday at Chappaqua’s problematic Roaring Brook Road crossing.

Sarah Feinberg, acting administrator of the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA), was joined by Rep. Nita Lowey, MTA Police Chief Mike Coan, New Castle Police Chief Charles Ferry and other officials and police officers to explore various actions that can be taken at Roaring Brook Road and many other grade crossings throughout the metropolitan area to enhance safety.

A key focus is ticketing drivers who unlawfully race through crossings when the warning lights and gates are activated, Feinberg said. By more aggressively penalizing drivers for breaking the law, they would be less likely to repeat making risky decisions, she said.

Ferry also suggested that state officials should raise fines and the number of points associated with that offense.

“What is amazing to me is that that horrific accident [in Valhalla], the vision of the loss of life and the pain and the suffering wasn’t imprinted, implanted on the minds of people and that they could still race to get across,” Lowey said.

Feinberg said there are more than 800 grade crossings in the tri-state area belonging to Metro-North, New Jersey Transit and the Long Island Railroad. She said education and enforcement should be stepped up as officials look to find more permanent solutions to improve grade crossing safety.

During the past month 20 tickets have been issued to drivers who tried to sneak under the arm at Roaring Brook Road, Ferry said. He noted those drivers made the attempt to beat the train while marked police cars were present and wondered how many drivers have tried that when no officers are present.

“It’s not just an issue for the person driving the car… it’s dangerous to all the commuters who are on the trains, so I think we need more enforcement,” Ferry said.

New Castle Supervisor Robert Greenstein, who was unable to attend Tuesday’s press conference, has repeatedly called for a bridge to be constructed at the Saw Mill Parkway-Roaring Brook Road interchange over the tracks since the Valhalla accident. Greenstein has stepped up that appeal following two more recent incidents.

On March 7, a driver was trapped after the arms came down, but was able to escape by putting the vehicle into reverse to move back from the tracks and causing the gate to break away. On Monday, an unidentified driver drove through the safety arm after it had lowered in order to get across the tracks before the train arrived.

“We need a bridge,” Greenstein said in an e-mail following Monday’s incident.

The Roaring Brook Road crossing is also less than a half-mile from Horace Greeley High School and the proposed Chappaqua Crossing site.

Coan said the MTA has jurisdiction over all its grade crossings but works closely with local, county and state police on enforcement. With so many crossings, it is impossible to have officers at all of them during peak hours, Coan said. The MTA will send officers to various locations when resources are available, especially when there is a nearby accident that requires drivers to be rerouted near a grade crossing.

It is believed that Ellen Brody, the driver of the SUV involved in the Feb. 3 Valhalla accident, ended up at the Commerce Street crossing after being diverted off of the Taconic Parkway because of a car crash. Feinberg said it is still being investigated and that permanent solutions there will not be proposed until probable cause is known.

Lowey also spoke at the Roaring Brook Road crossing last month with Rep. Sean Patrick Maloney to discuss the need for a public awareness campaign, similar to the “click it or ticket” seatbelt campaign. Metro-North President Joseph Giulietti said the railroad is also working with the state Department of Transportation and the Town of New Castle on making road and sign improvements at the crossing.

Several representatives who attended Tuesday’s press conference also renewed calls for improved technology that would detect obstructions at grade crossings and stop an approaching train remotely.
Aspiring Bronxville Teacher Residents were welcomed on March 24 at Bronxville School for an Open House by teachers and administrators of the school and representatives of LIU Hudson, Long Island University’s campus in Westchester. Trevon Troja, current student at LIU/ Hudson and ‘08 graduate of Bronxville School, found the event engaging and informative: “It was great to learn more about the program and to hear from administrators, Elementary School teachers and current interns.”

The Open House marked the expansion of the Teacher Residency Program, which provides a limited number of paid, clinically rich and full year experiences for future teachers. Bridging the gap between theory and practice, the residencies facilitate the transition of talented students from novices to full fledged professionals. The Teacher Residents work and learn under the attentive eyes of Bronxville teachers and administrators, and University professionals, who prepare teaching candidates to take on the challenges of the classroom. As Associate Dean Dr. Lea Rutmanowitz explains, “LIU Hudson and Bronxville Schools are seeking the best and brightest to take part in the residency program.”

Elementary School Assistant Principal Adrienne Laitman outlines the many benefits of the program, “Unlike a typical student-teaching experience, Bronxville Teacher Residents become an integral part of our school community for an entire year. As full fledged members of grade level teams, residents are involved in high level professional development and curriculum planning. Along with learning from master teachers, residents spend part of their time as substitutes. This ensures that Bronxville students have knowledgeable, highly skilled instructors in the room when their teachers are absent. Overall, this program provides new educators with exceptional field experience while also ensuring consistent, quality instruction for the students in the district.”

Applications for the 2015-2016 Teacher Residency Cohort are still being accepted. Appointments will be awarded on a competitive basis. Candidates presenting appropriate academic credentials, and prepared to commence master’s degree coursework in Summer or Fall 2015 are welcome to learn more about it by visiting the LIU Hudson website at http://www.liu.edu/Hudson/About/News-Events/Press-Releases/2015/February/Bronxville-Teacher-Residency or by contacting Dr. Rebecca Rich at Rebecca.rich@liu.edu or 914-831-2714.

White Plains Budget Director Continues Plea for Mandate Relief

White Plains Budget Director Continues Plea for Mandate Relief

The city also seeks renewal of the quarter percent sales tax rate which funds the Tax Stabilization Account and of the hotel occupancy tax, which provides about $1 million in annual revenue. Parking related revenue of $231 million represents 14.2 percent of General Fund revenues. Other sources include inter government grants and aid of $7.3 million representing 4.5 percent of total General Fund revenues.

Since 2010, Genito explained, White Plains has made significant strides in addressing the expenditure side of the budget. This was accomplished by the consolidation of administrative functions, workforce reductions, wage freezes and citywide reductions in various operational accounts. Despite efforts many costs, such as debt service continue to increase at rates greater than revenues, indicating the continued pressure of keeping costs down, to maintain tax levies under the state cap, while receiving no relief from mandates that are driving costs up.

Despite the pressures and a continuation of hiring restrictions, funding has been included to operate the city’s new Community Education Center. The Center is scheduled to open this summer and will receive revenue by leasing part of the facility that will help to offset costs. A new position, Special Patrol Officer, has been added to the Police Department to monitor taxis at the Transcenter to ensure a friendlier consumer experience.

The full Proposed Budget for 2015-2016 is available for view on the city’s website at cityofwhiteplains.com. On April 15 at 5:30 p.m. there will be a joint meeting of the Budget & Management Advisory Committee for a general review of the entire budget. Public Works, Public Safety and Parking will be reviewed at a 5:30 p.m. meeting on Monday April 20 Community Services at a 5:30 p.m. meeting on Wednesday, April 22.

A public hearing is scheduled for Monday, May 4, 7:30 p.m. in Common Council Chambers and the budget vote is scheduled for Wednesday, May 27.

Westchester County District Attorney
2nd Degree Manslaughter

Sentencing. Eric Gaulin (DOB 6/7/88) of Tarrytown, was sentenced to shock probation, six months in County Jail and five years post release supervision, on his October 2014 guilty plea to Manslaughter in the Second Degree, relating to the death of Megan Bookstaver.

Eric Gaulin

“Having any type of firearm in one's possession is a full-time job. As evidenced in this case, one cannot emphasize enough how a gun owner must know how to use, handle and store a firearm safely. The defendant, by abrogating that responsibility was liable for the outcome that resulted in the tragic consequences for all involved,” said District Attorney Janet DiFiore in a media statement.

On Monday, September 2, 2013, Labor Day, the defendant, his girlfriend, the deceased, and a mutual friend spend time together at the Palisades Center Mall in Rockland County.

They went to Dick's Sporting Goods where they purchased a Savage Arms Axis 243 caliber rifle for the victim in a pink and black camouflage color, along with a box of ammunition for a .308-caliber Winchester rifle owned by the defendant.

They all then went to the defendant's home in Tarrytown.

The defendant then took out several other rifles that he had in his possession at the house.

At about 4:20 p.m. a shot rang out and the victim was struck in the face by a projectile from one of the rifles.

Family members in the house called 911.

Tarrytown police and EMS responded but the victim was pronounced dead at the scene.

Assistant District Attorney Perry Perrone Chief of the Homicide Bureau and Assistant District Attorney Kristina Dushaj of the Investigations Division are prosecuting the case.

Greenburgh Police Department

Aggravated Harassment. On March 23 a White Plains resident called police to say he was receiving threats from an associate who had lent him money. The victim explained that in September 2013 he borrowed money from the alleged suspect and had been paying it back with interest until the day of the report, when the suspect asked for the money back in full. The victim said he was unable to do so. The suspect then left several voicemails on the victim's phone including one that states: "I'm coming to your house, I'm going to f... you up, f... your wife. Call the cops I don't care." The victim advised his wife of the threats. She left the residence to stay with friends until further notice. The victim claims he has reason to believe that the suspect might actually hurt him and his wife and is willing to press charges. A formal statement was made at police headquarters.

Suspicious Incident. On the morning of March 24, police were called to the Richard J. Bailey School. Upon arrival contact was made with a faculty member who reported that just before 7 a.m. he was parked in his vehicle in the school parking lot when he observed a suspicious individual taking pictures on the school grounds. The teacher reported that the suspicious individual was parked in a grey Minivan and was described as an elderly white male with grey/brown hair. He was parked in the southwest area of the parking lot and appeared to be taking pictures with a professional photography camera, possibly of other staff as they entered the southern entrance of the building. The teacher approached the individual and attempted to question him as to why he was taking pictures on the school grounds. The subject appeared startled and replied: "I'm just here taking pictures of the sunrise." The suspect was never seen outside his vehicle. After being approached, the subject slowly drove off the property and was last seen traveling toward route 119. A check on the vehicle's registration revealed it to be registered to a Rye resident. Police department communications personnel attempted to find a phone number for the suspect, but nothing turned up. City of Rye Police were notified, but they did not have any reports on record regarding the suspect.

Petit Larceny. On March 23 two Red Max backpack blowers were reported stolen from a trailer in White Plains. The lock hasp on the trailer had been cut. No other items were taken and no other damage reported. The victim, who reported a similar larceny the previous month, said he only wanted to document the incident at this time.

Reckless Endangerment. During the late afternoon of March 24 police responded to calls of shots fired in the area of Winthrop Avenue and Payne Street. After determining that there were no immediate threats visible at the residence where the report was made, police began to canvas on foot. They discovered multiple shell casings on the pavement down the street. As more units arrived, a crime scene was established the length of Winthrop Avenue, extending from Payne Street to White Plains Avenue. The shell casings were marked, and officers began conducting a door-to-door canvass of the area to ensure that there were no shooting victims, and to obtain information.

It is suspected that just before calls were placed to 911, a suspect vehicle, believed to be black in color, was traveling South on Winthrop Avenue, and did approach a group of subjects standing near 151 Winthrop Ave. Occupants of the suspect vehicle began shooting at the subjects standing on the street, at which time the subjects standing on the street, shot back. The suspect vehicle then fled South on Winthrop Avenue toward White Plains Avenue, and the subjects on foot, fled in an unknown direction. Bullet holes were found in the window of one home and the fence on the property of another. After canvassing, the scene was preserved for the Detective Division.

Burglary. On March 24 police were dispatched to a residence in Greenburgh on the report of a burglary. The resident remained outside while police searched the property. Inside the premises things were in disorder with jewelry, clothing and other personal items strewn about in most rooms. Several electronic items including TVs and a Toshiba tablet were missing. It appears that entry was made through the sliding doors in the dining room. The doors were completely pushed in bending the frame and the glass but not shattering the glass. The sliding doors in the kitchen had pry marks showing an unsuccessful attempt to make entry. Photos were taken and the area canvassed. Neighbors had not seen anything suspicious, but did notice that lights had not been on in the house for a few days, which they said was unusual. The resident was not sure what items had been taken and was given a form and advised to contact police headquarters when her list was complete.

Suspicious Incident. On March 25 police responded to the Springhill Suites Marriott where they were told that a male had on three separate occasions in the past two days approached the front desk looking to break large denomination bills into smaller amounts even after being told that it was against hotel policy. The party is described as a black male in his mid to late 20's with short black hair, a goatee, and black framed glasses, wearing a grey hoodie with a Champion logo across the front, a dark blue denim jacket, black Adidas pants with white stripes, and white sneakers with black laces. Video surveillance shows the party entering the premises from the west and leaving in an east bound direction toward housing across the street on Old White Plains Road. The hotel manager said they have no employees or customers fitting the description, and were concerned because of a recent burglary. Photos of the suspect party were to be emailed to police headquarters and the manager was told to call police if the party returned to the hotel.

Grand Larceny. On March 26, police responded to the new Saks Fifth Avenue at 29 Tarrytown Road. Store security informed them that they had a past larceny of $2,999.99 on 3/17/2015 that they observed on surveillance cameras. (The store did not file a police report sooner because they did not have the exact amount and total of the items stolen.) The offending suspect was observed entering the store through the front doors, grabbed a Saks Fifth Ave mesh bag then walked over to a table by the front door that had wallets and handbags on it. The suspect stuffed the mesh bag with 10 Burberry wallets and two handbags, then turned around and ran out of the store front doors, and turned right running Eastbound towards Fulton Street. The Store Security has the entire larceny on surveillance video and will furnish the tape to police.

Suspicious Activity. On March 28, officers and other police units responded to Five Below in Crossroads at 389 Tarrytown Rd. on a report of a man with a gun. The complainant was a customer at the store, who reported that a black male wearing a black jacket, black pants and orange sunglasses was bothering customers in the store and had what appeared to be a gun strapped to his chest. Officers interviewed the store manager and other employees who confirmed the identity of the man with the gun. They said he was bothering customers in the store and had what appeared to be a brown colored rifle handle strapped to his chest with the other end tucked into his jacket. One of the employees knew the man and asked him to leave the store, which he did without incident. No one actually saw a gun, just a handle. The man never took the item out of his jacket nor did he touch it. There was no videotape available from the store. However, the same man had been identified at the Not Just Deli at 250 Tarrytown Rd. on a similar report. Police made contact with the man, who had no weapons on him at the time. No further report at this time.

A Westchester-Style Sampling, Plus Continuing the Search for Good BBQ

Hosted by Lord & Taylor General Manager Charles McGuinness were appearances by Domenic Cesarini, proprietor of The Quarry, Tuckahoe; Chef/owner Paul Caputo of Gina Marie's Chianti, Tuckahoe; Bill Etzel, partner at Coals Grilled Pizza Restaurants, Bronxville and Port Chester; Michael Pasqualini, proprietor of Mansion On Broadway caterers; and the DiNapoli family of Angelina's and Olde Stone Mill Restaurant in Tuckahoe. It was a crowd section of complimentary tastings from their menus.

Lord & Taylor Hosts a Tasty Charity Day.

Thousands of patrons arriving at Lord & Taylor in Eastchester for their bi-annual fundraiser, “Shop Smart, Do Good Day” held on March 27th found a flavorful addition to the shopping event on the main floor. Guest restaurants had set up tables throughout the afternoon and evening offering a cross section of complimentary tastings from their menus.

It was a busy Saturday night, so once we arrived we were told the wait for a table would be about 45 minutes. There is a dearth of BBQ in Westchester, so I was anxious to try this newcomer and we hung in. Some background: Stamford got a Dinosaur BBQ a couple of years ago, now downtown White Plains has a 200-plus seat Brother Jimmy's at Mamaroneck Ave. at East Post Road in the short-lived Butterfield 8 space. It opened as a full-fledged Brother Jimmy's style BBQ franchise last summer and has been packing them in ever since.

So what is Brother Jimmy's style BBQ? On my ongoing quest for great BBQ I have been to Brother Jimmy's restaurants in Manhattan on a number of occasions and I found them hit or miss. They had one on the Upper East Side on 3rd Ave., which closed a couple of years ago though it always appeared busy, and that one was consistently fine. On the other hand, their original Manhattan unit further downtown on First Street was just okay, at least in my opinion. So all you BBQ lovers out there anticipating White Plains’ first southern cooking at franchises from South Florida to Yankee Stadium. The new Brother Jimmy's BBQ is located at 147 Mamaroneck Ave., White Plains. Phone: 914-358-4838; www.brotherjimmys.com.

Dickey's BBQ Pit, Yonkers. D e s e r v e s Mention, Too. While we're on the subject of BBQ, I must mention the arrival of Dickey's BBQ Pit in the High Ridge Shopping Center on Central Park Ave. in Yonkers. It could be the best BBQ in Westchester right now. Dickey's is part of a chain out of Texas with just a handful of tables, a take-out station, vintage photos of the Lone Star original on the wall and a line of utensil, drink and sauce dispensers in the rear. Simple, and that's how no-frills BBQ joints usually come off. After ordering bags full of take-out here several times (they do a great job of wrapping it all) I have come away quite happy. The succulent ribs roasted in hickory wood burning pits right on the premises, beautifully fatty crusted brisket and moist Italian marinated chicken, which you can order cut or uncut, are all delicious. Sides that we tried were a good down home complement to the meal, too: BBQ beans, creamy cole slaw, mac & cheese, green beans & bacon. A friend of mine raves about the fried okra. Dickeys BBQ Pit is located at 1789 Central Park Ave., Yonkers. Phone: 914-509-6569; www.dickeys.com.

Westchester Knicks Conclude Inaugural Season at the County Center

By Albert Coqueran

The Westchester Knicks concluded their inaugural season with a loss to the Canton Charge, 101-89, at the Westchester County Center, on Saturday, April 4. The Westchester Knicks ended their inaugural season with a 10-40 record and did not make the playoffs. The County Center inhabitants lost the last 19 of 21 games. More devastating, they only produced one road win the entire season, while recording a 1-25 record on the road.

The local Knicks in surmountable amount of losses was certainly the reason for the firing of Kevin Whitted, the Westchester Knicks inaugural Head Coach. But why was he fired with four games remaining in the season remains a mystery?

Whitted was fired as the Westchester Knicks inaugural Head Coach, on October 8, 2014. The highlight of his tenure has to be the elevation of his original roster player Langston Galloway into the starting line-up of the NY Knicks.

On March 30, Whitted was replaced by Assistant Coach Craig Hodges, as the Westchester Knicks Interim Head Coach. Hodges played in the NBA for 10 seasons and is a disciple of NY Knicks President Phil Jackson. Hodges won two NBA Championships (1990-91 and 1991-92) with the Chicago Bulls, when Jackson was their Head Coach. Hodges was also an assistant coach under Jackson with the Los Angeles Lakers from 2005-2011.

Now the only two questions that remain regarding Hodges are whether he is hired as the Westchester Knicks second Head Coach in franchise history and can he create a winning team at the County Center?

“I have not heard anything (concerning my status as coming back as the Head Coach). It is enough said that the season is over and I am disappointed. I am a Champion and nobody could have told me that this would be our record this season,” stated Hodges.

Hodges went to reflect on the Westchester Knicks inaugural season and his chances of returning as Head Coach. “This is a good situation but it is not my decision, it is their decision, if it was my decision, I would definitely be back just from the bitter taste in my mouth,” commented Hodges.

The Westchester Knicks undoubtedly were a major disappointment on the court concerning competing with other teams in the NBA D-League. However, as far as their fan base, they were winners merely for making Westchester County and the Westchester County Center their home.

The County Center for the Westchester Knicks 24 home games, registered a 90 percent capacity overall, with an average attendance of 1,906 fans per game in an arena that seats 2,119. Furthermore, there was never a lack of enthusiasm or fan participation at any home game.

“I feel the fans in Westchester County deserve a playoff team. I feel while playing across the country, we are probably the top two or three venues as far as fan support,” said Hodges. “We appreciate the fans coming out and we thank them very much for their support. It is indicative of New York fans; they are knowledgeable of the game and they stick with you through thick and thin,” concluded Hodges.

Kyle Adams, Former Tigers Baseball Star-Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week

By Albert Coqueran

Kyle Adams, the Tigers former star catcher, graduated in 2013 and attended Salisbury Prep School in Connecticut. Adams was recruited by the University of Richmond and joined the team this year as a freshman.

Adams is already making a name for himself with the Spiders. The White Plains native was selected as the Atlantic 10 Conference Rookie of the Week for Baseball, on March 30.

Adams, while playing outfield for Richmond, batted .562 going 9-for-16 at the plate, with a double, six RBI and seven runs scored, as the Spiders went 4-0 for the week of March 23-30.

Adams did most of his offensive damage in a three-game homestand against visiting Fordham University, while getting seven hits in 13 at bats (.418), a double and six RBI. Adams must have had some added incentive while playing against the Bronx located Fordham, as the Rams passed on the local talent upon his graduation for WPHS in 2013.

Adams was selected as The White Plains Examiner WPHS Spring Athlete of the Season in 2012. He is pictured above accepting the award with Tigers Head Coach Marcel Galligani, at WPHS in 2012.

In 18 games for the Spiders (17-8 overall, 8-1 A-10) this season, Adams is batting .407 with five doubles, two homéruns, 26 RBI and 17 runs scored.
Tigers Open 2015 Baseball Season with Loss to Mahopac, Galligani Tossed from Game

Anyone who has attended White Plains High School baseball games for the past decade would admit that Tigers Head Coach Marcel Galligani has a flare for the dramatics. But of those same people, nobody would suggest that Galligani does not have the best interest of his student-athletes at heart and that he has an unwavering passion for the game of baseball.

Galligani began his 14th season as White Plains Varsity Head Baseball Coach, with the Tigers Home Opener against Mahopac High School, on Wednesday, April 1.

The Tigers lost a hard fought game to the Indians, 4-3, as catcher Andy Iglesias halted a seventh inning scoring opportunity by trying to take two bases on a sacrifice bunt with only one out.

The Tigers had not scored the entire game against Indians starter John Reda, who threw a three-hitter for five innings. However, White Plains did manage to get to reliever Cal Lawrence, who gave up three runs in the sixth inning, which included a two RBI-double to Tigers starting pitcher Daniel Lotito.

The game remained 4-3, after Lotito was relieved by freshman pitcher Spencer Lodes in the sixth inning. Lodes held the Indians scoreless for one and two-third innings with two strikeouts to end the top of the seventh inning.

With the score 4-3, Tigers catcher Iglesias was hit-by-pitch to leadoff the bottom of the seventh inning. Tigers' centerfielder Steven Rand laid down a beautiful sacrifice bunt and the throw was a little high to first base, so Iglesias decided on his own to try and take third base, after reaching second base with the tying run.

The physical posture and expression of Tigers Assistant Coach Brian Pirone, who was coaching Third Base at the time, indicated quite clearly that Iglesias was thrown-out at third base. What made this an even more crucial base running error was that on deck was senior Ricardo Mendez, who already doubled in the game. Mendez grounded out and the Tigers lost, 4-3.

"It was crazy. We just had to capitalize on that play with the runner getting to third base. We will regroup, learn from our mistakes and comeback next game," stated Mendez.

One has to wonder if Iglesias, while representing the tying run with only one out in the last inning, would have even have thought about running, if Galligani had not been ejected from the game after the fifth inning and had remained at his usual position, as the Third Base Coach.

Not called on Iglesias, Galligani stated that he did not use any of the "magic words" when speaking with the umpire.

Furthermore, there was no apparent commotion whatsoever on the field. Also, the ejection-gesture was so nonchalant by the field umpire while speaking with Galligani that even the White Plains bench, including at least one of the coaches, were not aware immediately that Galligani was tossed from the game.

However, according to the veteran Head Coach the ejection was prompted by an earlier discussion with the same umpire. "I think it was the second or third inning, I went out for a conference with my pitcher I was there for 15 or 20 seconds literally and the same umpire was rushing me off the mound," revealed Galligani. "So I asked him why he was rushing me. I asked him how much time I had for conference and he replied 'a minute', so I said if I get a minute why are you rushing me off the mound. I think he felt disrespected by me saying that in front of the players on the mound and that is the reason he took it out at that junction of the game," expressed Galligani.

It was a crucial time of the game and Galligani stated, "At that point all I said to both umpires was that I cannot believe that both of you missed that call, while discussing the second no-call on a hit-by-pitch. The umpire said what did you say and I asked him why he was coming at me controversial like a tough guy, and then he tossed me out of the game," said Galligani.

Maybe Galligani should have let it go but he was losing 4-0 at that time and every base runner meant a chance to win. Also, he was discussing the play in a normal tone of voice between innings and not during the course of play.

Nonetheless, the Tigers young team has an entire season to right the course of events and make this year a winning season. They have a young team with four seniors, 10 juniors one sophomore and freshman pitcher Lodes.

"I feel like everybody is going to come together and we are going to be good this season. I have a lot of faith in these young guys. This year we have a lot of young new players, give them a couple of games and we should be good," commented Mendez.
