White Plains Religious Leaders Stand United Against Heritage of Hate

By Pat Casey

A gathering of White Plains Religious Leaders stood on the steps of Grace Episcopal Church Friday to read a Statement of unified response to the KKK Rally in Charleston, SC to be held the following day in protest of the bringing down of the Confederate battle flag at the South Carolina State House.

The letter, signed by 21 church leaders, representing numerous religious communities (including Christian, Jewish and Humanitarian traditions), is a major step forward of a growing interfaith movement in White Plains, which until recent shootings involving communities (including Christian, religious leaders representing numerous religious communities within White Plains had to begin celebrating and working together.

That group released a statement to show support of their African-American friends, colleagues and congregations.

The statement acknowledges the right of the KKK to assemble and voice their First Amendment Rights. Yet, it says: “At the same time, we speak with a unified voice of our opposition to the heritage of hate, slavery, and treason that this flag represents. We also reel from the hurt and emotional pain that this flag symbolizes to our African American friends and colleagues and therefore will not be silent.”

During the gathering Rev. Dr. Gregory Robeson Smith, Pastor of Mount Hope A.M.E. Zion Church said that it was not enough to just dialog, that the various religious communities within White Plains had to begin celebrating and working together.

“The bringing down of the Confederate battle flag is an important symbolic gesture,” Rev. Smith continued. “But fundamental structural changes have to be made.” One example is a review of the criminal justice system. “The lynching tree is still there,” he said.

Pets Alive Westchester Closing Announcement Gets Response

By Pat Casey

Animal welfare group Pets Alive announced Thursday that it plans to restructure its organization by closing its Westchester facility located in Elmsford, and consolidate operations to its Middletown, NY location.

Skyrocketing repair and maintenance costs of what the group calls the “structurally unsound Westchester shelter” coupled with declining revenue were reasons cited for the decision.

Pets Alive Westchester was closed from mid-March through July in 2014 due to cracks in the building’s structure, and the organization explained that it had spent most of the last year exploring options to permanently repair the structure with multiple experts but estimates to save the building total well over a million dollars with no guarantee that the building will be safe.

“Although closing the Westchester location was a very difficult decision to make, the reality is that no amount of money is going to make this building safe in the long term,” said Erin Guilshan, Executive Director of Pets Alive Westchester in a media statement. “There are issues that cannot be fixed. We have to think about what is best and safest for the animals in our care.”

In response Greenburgh Town Supervisor Paul Feiner has sent out a statement, requesting people to come forward with ideas to keep the animal shelter in Westchester.

Feiner also asks if Pets Alive has the right to keep the land.

In an email Feiner notes that when Pets Alive took over the former Elmsford Animal shelter the land was donated for the sole purpose of being used as a no kill animal shelter.

Having worked to make that deal possible while he was on the Westchester Board of Legislators, Feiner said: “I do not believe that Pets Alive should be able to keep the land if they are not going to use the land for a shelter. Pets Alive should either give the land back to animal rights advocates who can take over the responsibilities of the shelter or if they sell the land 100 percent of the funds raised should be used to find another location in Westchester County.”

Feiner also explained that the building used by the shelter was built with private donations. “Hundreds of volunteers have worked long and hard to provide important services to animal lovers. Many terrific matches were made by the shelter volunteers, helping to find homes for pets,” he said.

Feiner said he would ask the Greenburgh Town Attorney to review the deed to determine if the Town has the right to keep the land. He also intends to bring the issue up with the Town Board.

In the meantime, Pets Alive management said in addition to the building problems, they are also taking into consideration the operating costs for the building, which exceeds 30,000 square feet. Much of that space goes unused but still needs to be heated, cooled and cared for.

“The Pets Alive organization believes we have a fiscal responsibility to our donors. Although the decision was difficult, we cannot continue to spend our donor’s funds on a building that cannot be properly repaired and costs a phenomenal amount just to maintain. This restructuring will allow us to focus more on our mission to save the lives of the animals that need us,” said Pets Alive Chief Financial Officer Jenessa Cutler.

Both Pets Alive locations have waived their adoption fee for the immediate future. They will be offering animals for adoption to qualified adopters for a donation of the adopter’s choosing. The facility will stay open for several more months to rehome the animals already housed in the building, although no new animals will be taken in. Any animals remaining in Westchester will be transferred to the Middletown location.

Pets Alive also emphasizes that absolutely no animals will be euthanized because of this transition.

At this time, Pets Alive welcomes the support of the community in the form of financial donations and volunteer help on both sites to prepare for the transition of the animals. Donations can be made at www.petsalive.org or mailed to Pets Alive, 363 Derby Road, Middletown, NY 10940. Pets Alive is a registered 501c3 not-for-profit.

Rev. Smith also noted that while the flag was taken down, voting rights had not improved in South Carolina and he rhetorically asked the South Carolina State Governor what she intended to do about that.

The letter read: “…racism must be undone through our work of building authentic community. It is in the hard work of relationship-building that we begin to undo the destructive systems that were built so long ago.”

In saying this the White Plains Religious Leaders commit to several actions.

The first was to take up a special offering on Sunday, July 19 for the African American churches that have been burned due to arson attempts. The congregations will then begin participating in a citywide pulpit exchange this fall between traditionally white and African-American Christian churches in White Plains.

New Host Lights Up White Plains Cable Program “This Blooming City”

By Beth Wallach

As the White Plains Beautification Foundation (WPBF) celebrates its 50th anniversary as an all-volunteer, not-for-profit organization, its cable television program “This Blooming City” celebrates 25 years of bringing gardening, landscaping, environmental issues, and much more to viewers at home. Making its debut in June 1990, the show is now hosted by Marie Silverman Marich, a past co-president of the foundation, and an avid volunteer. A long-time resident of White Plains, Marie grew up here and was educated at Our Lady of Sorrows Elementary School, Good Counsel Academy, Marymount Manhattan College, and Katherine Gibbs School.

Although Marie has lived in Manhattan and Los Angeles, she has always regarded White Plains as her hometown, and her parents, Syd and Jan Silverman, were very active in the community.

Since returning to White Plains 16 years ago, Marie has held volunteer leadership positions in several not-for-profit organizations. She was president/co-president of the Auxiliary Board of St. Vincent’s Hospital Westchester, corresponding secretary of The Woman’s Club of White Plains, board secretary of Family Services of Westchester, and co-president of the White Plains Beautification Foundation. Marie has also produced profitable journals and programs for charity events.

Career-wise, Marie has worked in various capacities at major advertising and public relations agencies and newspapers in New York and Los Angeles.

Recent shows have featured WPBF founder Brian Wallach, Adopt-a-Park co-chairs Barbara Vrooman and Jean Bello, 50th Anniversary chair Karen Quinn, and Daffodil Project chairs Joanna D’Addario and Mary Ann DeRosa, Arbor Day chair Kathleen Masterson, vice president Suzanne Evans, who is also the foundation’s planting chair, and Blaine Leveson, chairman of the 50th anniversary street clock project – a special gift that will be presented to the City on September 23rd.

Marie enjoys the challenge of hosting “This Blooming City” and highlighting the extraordinary accomplishments of the volunteers who have helped make White Plains a wonderful place to live, work, and play, and helping to achieve the foundation’s goal: White Plains, the “City in a Park.” Since this summer reaches the pinnacle of the foundation’s 50th anniversary, drawing attention to the many board member volunteers who made this happen is the highlight of Marie’s interviews.

She hopes that through the cable show more people will become interested in the Beautification Foundation’s work and even become involved.

For more information, see the website at www.WPBF.org To receive a newsletter, call 914-428-4040. The next WPBF meeting will be held at White Plains Library, second floor, on Monday, August 3, at 7:15 p.m.

“This Blooming City” airs on Verizon FIOS Channel 45 and Cablevision Channel 76 Saturdays at 6:30 p.m. and Sundays at 10:30 a.m.

Task Force Launched to Address Concussion Issues in High School Sports

By Sarah Bonanno

County Executive Rob Astorino announced the formation Monday of the Westchester County Concussion Task Force to help high schools address the public health concern of sports-related concussions.

Headed by Dr. Mark Herceg, the county’s commissioner of Community Mental Health, the task force will develop a voluntary management protocol for high schools. The group will be comprised of 20 experts, including school district athletic directors, trainers, neurologists and psychologists.

The initiative, dubbed Safer Sports, is part of Astorino’s broader Safer Communities campaign, which educates community members on countywide public health and safety issues, such as heroin use, sexual assault on college campuses and youth mental health.

According to the Center for Disease Control, 45 million children across the country participate in sports. Between 1.6 million and 1.8 million of those participants will suffer a sports-related concussion, and 85 percent of those children will recover completely.

"In examining this climate, the dialogue centers on prevention and education, and I thought we had to form a task force...to look at management: how do we manage the concussion from beginning to end,” Herceg said.

This summer the task force will create an optional model program for districts to implement that will focus on teaching parents, teachers, coaches and students how to prevent and manage concussions. The first educational conference will take place on Aug. 20 at the County Center in White Plains. Experts from across the country will speak.

“We want to increase education, understanding and preparedness so we can mitigate any lasting effects that might happen if a concussion does occur,” Astorino said. “We also want to improve the coordination of the many available resources to benefit athletes, schools and facilities.”

Herceg said one of the task force’s main goals is to evaluate how districts manage and address concussions to ensure that students, parents and teachers receive the proper information.

"Part of it is to get away from some of the misinformation about it, to break down the realities versus the myths,” Astorino said.

One of the most common pieces of misinformation, Herceg said, is the popular use of impact testing, a 20-minute neurocognitive computer assessment, administered by nonexperts to diagnose and manage concussions. Herceg advocates that families instead rely on trained specialists to make diagnoses and determine how to manage a concussion.

“I call this the Goldilocks problem – too hot, too cold, just right,” said task force member Dr. Ronald Jacobson, chief of pediatric neurology at Maria Fareri Children’s Hospital in Valhalla. “Concussion is often overdiagnosed and is simultaneously underdiagnosed. Not in the same patient, obviously, but I think that getting it right is really what the answer has to be.”

Astorino said he wants the task force to not only raise awareness about proper concussion management, but also to help encourage children to safely participate in sports.

"It’s not about scaring parents. It’s not about pushing kids out of sports,” Astorino said. “We want our kids involved with sports. It keeps them healthy, all the things that are involved with a sports team, the camaraderie, the learning, that’s important to growing up. It’s about educating our parents, educating our coaches and dealing with issues and injuries if they happen.”

The Aug. 20 conference, which begins at 5:30 p.m., is open to the public at no charge. Parents, coaches and teachers are encouraged to attend. Refreshments will be served. Those interested in attending should RSVP Deatra Santos at dys1@westchestergov.com or 914-995-5245.
War of Words Heats Up as Miller House Controversy Escalates

By Martin Wilbur

North Castle Supervisor Michael Schiliro unleashed harsh criticism of County Legislator Michael Smith last week after a guest column by the lawmaker’s aide accused the town of refusing to cooperate with county officials to help renovate the historic Miller House.

The column, written by Anthony Amiano and published in the July 7 Examiner, stated that some speakers who implored Smith and county officials at a recent town meeting to renovate the 277-year-old house in its current location put on a performance that was worthy of a Broadway show.

Amiano’s piece also referred to the Friends of Miller House, an organization that was formed to help raise money for future programs at the site, as “radical.” The reference was made because Friends President Ed Woodyard compared county government’s disregard for the site to ISIS blowing up Palmyra in Syria at a discussion as the June 24 town board meeting.

An outraged Schiliro said the column was “deplorable” for attacking volunteers and for misrepresenting circumstances last month’s discussion. Schiliro countered last weekend that he and Councilman Anthony Schiliro had been responsible for painting.

“To have the county government compared to terrorists especially when we have people fighting overseas, is just horrible,” Smith said. “I can understand it being an oversight that night, but to refuse to say anything almost three weeks later is so egregious.”

Schiliro countered last weekend that he wouldn’t have chosen those words but that Woodyard is one of the town’s most dedicated volunteers on a wide variety of efforts. The comment reflected the passion and frustration of many town residents, he said.

Amiano said it was outrageous that Schiliro would question his integrity by insinuating that he attached his name to a piece that he didn’t write. He pointed out that he has written letters to the editor on several other unrelated issues.

Unless the town and county can engage in productive talks, Amiano warned the town may no longer be asked for input.

“We’re transparent, we put a process in place and that’s how we operate,” Smith said. “We’re not involved in the process much while the town would have been responsible for painting.”

Smith charged that the county had been trying to unload its obligations. In 2013, discussions were ongoing to work out an agreement outlining responsibilities for different tasks. For example, the county would have been in charge of structural repairs and maintenance while the town would have been responsible for painting.

Diaconis dismissed Smith’s comments and said for many North Castle residents saving Miller House cuts across political parties.

“The citizens of North Castle have been working for several years to save this important historic site,” Diaconis said. “I regret that Mr. Smith has chosen to turn this into a political issue. I just want the county to follow the law and properly repair and maintain the house.”

Police Blotter

Greenburgh Police Department

DUI. On July 6, while conducting a checkpoint at Tarnty Road and I-287 a vehicle was stopped for suspicion of DWI. While officers interviewed the driver a strong odor of burning marijuana was detected. It was noticed that the driver had glasy bloodshot eyes and he said he had smoked marijuana about 30 minutes prior to the traffic stop. He was asked to pull to the side for further investigation. The driver was asked to exit the vehicle so standardized field sobriety tests could be administered. The driver failed and was arrested and transported to police headquarters for booking. The vehicle was impounded.

Possession of Controlled Substance. On July 6 police responded to a motor vehicle accident. The vehicle had been observed by several witnesses driving on the wrong side of the road before it crashed. When police arrived, the driver was sitting on the curb behind his vehicle. He had blood shot eyes, was unable to follow directions, and appeared to be out of it. In his vehicle, in plain view on the front seat, was drug paraphernalia. Drug paraphernalia was also found in the center console. After finding the paraphernalia, the driver admitted he was under the influence of a narcotic (PCP). He said he was “dusted.” Because he was not able to follow directions, the driver was not administered the standard field tests, but was arrested. A subsequent search uncovered three bags of a green leafy substance with a strong odor emanating from the bags. Officers believed it was mint leaves laced with PCP, which was later confirmed.

Suspicious Incident. On the morning of July 6 a Greenburgh resident went to police headquarters to document a series of suspicious phone calls. He said he received two calls from an unknown number (985-625-4348) during which the caller asked: “This is about your Windows 7 computer, right?” and then hung up. He then attempted to make contact with caller but was unsuccessful and got a voice response stating: “You have reached a number that’s been disconnected or not in service.” The person reporting the calls was suspicious because he had a prior incident when his information was compromised. He was advised to change his number to prevent similar incidents from occurring. Report is for documentation purposes only.

Petit Larceny. On the morning of July 6 police received a call that a homeowner’s garden hose had been stolen overnight. The red and black hose with a gold colored spray nozzle had been stored on the right side of the house and was missing. The caller had paid $75 at Home Depot for the hose.

Recovered Property. On July 7 police responded to 11 Granada Crescent on a report of a suspicious package. Upon arrival a suitcase containing clothing, headphones and a phone charger was found on the sidewalk next to parking spaces in front of Building 11. There was no identification either on or inside the suitcase. The suitcase was taken to headquarters and stored.

Harassment. On July 7 a victim of harassment went to police headquarters to report the ongoing situation. The victim said that on June 25 he had filed a report with the Greenburgh Police Department about an unknown male leaving him harassing text and phone messages (2015-006368). Concerned with the type of messages being left, the victim went to AT&T to get a new phone number. Shortly after receiving the new phone number, he began receiving harassing text and phone messages from the same individual. The victim also discovered that this male somehow got into his phone and had all his phone calls forwarded to another 631 area code number and was also listening in on his conversations. The victim called AT&T and was advised to stop using his cell phone and contact the local police department immediately. No further information could be obtained at this time.

Identity Theft. On July 7 a victim of identity theft went to police headquarters to report that in June she had e-filed her taxes with her accountant. After submitting the taxes she was informed by her accountant that her refund was rejected with rejection code (Duplicate SS#) and was advised to contact the IRS. The victim further stated that after speaking with an IRS representative she was informed that taxes have already been filed with her social security number in January, and two refund checks have been issued in the amount of $684 and $1599. The victim had no knowledge of her taxes being filed on that date, nor did she receive any refund checks in the amounts stated. The victim needed a police report to further work with the IRS.

Criminal Tampering. On July 9 officers responded to Beech street parking lot on a report of a damaged car tire. The victim told police someone had let the air out of the rear passenger side tire and that a cap to a lug nut from the tire had been placed on the roof of the car. There did not appear to be damage to the tire. The victim uses the vehicle on a regular basis.

Westchester Legislator to Convene Hearings on Rashad McNulty Jail Death

Westchester County Legislator Ken Jenkins (D-Yonkers) announced last week that he will convene hearings into the jail death of Rashad McNulty.

A recently released report from the New York State Commission of Correction found that the two nurses who were in contact with McNulty while he was in custody by Westchester corrections showed “gross incompetence” in their treatment of McNulty after he complained of chest and stomach pains hours before dying of a heart condition. The State Commission urged licensing authorities to investigate the nurses for professional misconduct.

Jenkins will hold the hearing as the Board of Legislators Chair of the Federal and State Affairs Committee.

In 2010 Jenkins expressed concerns about the correctional health services vendor, Correct Care Solutions, cited in the report when he questioned giving a contract to a company that was involved, “in over 140 federal lawsuits due to lack of medical care.” Correct Care Solutions has mounting legal troubles, most recently being subjected to a federal lawsuit on behalf of the family of a Davidson County, Tennessee inmate who suffered from inflammation in his stomach and an untreated ulcer, who died in 2009 from lack of medical care.

After the report was released by the NYS Commission on Correction, Jenkins, who represents McNulty’s home community in Yonkers, explained: “Nobody deserves to be treated this way when there are clear cardiac symptoms and so these hearings will help disclose why this individual was treated so poorly.”

“Given that this vendor was not the low bidder during the recent contract process the county undertook, it is important to understand why they received this contract and what services we are getting because the report from the state would indicate that taxpayers are paying a lot of money for poor service in return. We will seek to clarify and improve medical procedures in county correctional facilities based on the faults outlined in this incident,” Jenkins said in a media statement.
Gedney Resident Disagrees Strongly With Councilman's Position on FASNY

Councilman John Kirkpatrick’s comments on the FASNY application during the recent Common Council Work Session, in my view, showed incredible disdain for the neighborhoods in the south end of White Plains that have vigorously opposed the FASNY development.

Mr. Kirkpatrick discussed his experience as a land use attorney while at the same time “complimenting” the neighborhood for arguing for a decrease in the proposed school population. How disingenuous. As any rookie land use attorney knows developers always ask for more than they expect to be approved. Secondly the neighbors in the vicinity of the former Golf Club never asked for a reduction in the school population: they believed placing a regional school of 260,000 square feet on the Club property was inappropriate and remains so.

Mr. Kirkpatrick said that the Common Council must do what is best for all the residents of the City. Where was the groundswell for FASNY? In fact, over 3,000 residents from virtually every street in the City signed a petition against FASNY. Neighborhood associations throughout the City are on record opposing the project. Other than residents with some connection to FASNY support for the school has been miniscule. FASNY will pay no taxes in a City already constrained by budgetary limitations.

Mr. Kirkpatrick said that change is difficult and “neighborhoods deteriorate, although not this one.” In fact, since FASNY made its proposal residential property values have sharply declined, which is the first step in a neighborhood’s decline.

Mr. Kirkpatrick did not cite the standards required for issuance of Special Permits under the City’s zoning law. Why? The FASNY application does not come close to meeting them. One of the standards is that any Special Permit use be in “harmony” with the neighborhood in question.

Mr. Kirkpatrick focused on the so-called traffic modifications FASNY has made. But he makes no mention of our School Board’s letter calling the proposed entrance on North Street profoundly unsafe. He also chose not to mention the concerns of the City’s own traffic consultant regarding “mandatory busing” and other myths like FASNY vehicles will use the already congested Parkway instead of Mamaroneck Avenue and Ridgeway.

Mr. Kirkpatrick never said a word about the City’s Comprehensive Plan. The FASNY plan is not compatible with the Comprehensive Plan, as the City’s own Conservation Board stated.

Finally, Mr. Kirkpatrick said it is now time to declare “Victory” and approve FASNY and transfer a local street used by the residents to the school. I think a better “Victory” would be for residents to turn Mr. Kirkpatrick out of office should he decide to seek reelection and replace him with someone who will represent the residents of White Plains.

Greenburgh Intern Recommends Summer Self-Defense Seminars

This summer many girls like me will be heading off to college, excited to live away from home and experience greater independence. However, the sobering reality is that with this freedom comes the risk of sexual assault in the campus environment. Recent statistics estimate that one in five women will be sexually assaulted during her years in college. As President Obama noted last year during the launch of his “It’s on Us” campaign, “the trauma, the terror [of a campus sexual assault] can shadow you long after the trauma, the terror [of a campus sexual assault] can shadow you long after.

"I think that because we’re fortunate to give us a false sense of security... I signed the waivers and I never even thought about them. " The skills I’ve learned are very beneficial for participants of all ages and backgrounds. Learning self-defense techniques has not only enhanced my confidence. I feel confident that I would be able to use the techniques I’ve learned to react quickly and effectively in the event of an attack. Participant Beatrice P, who plans to attend both seminars commented, “I think that because we’re fortunate to live in a very safe neighborhood it can give us a false sense of security... I signed up to learn how to defend myself so that I’m prepared for whatever environment or situation I’m in.” The skills I’ve learned are applicable to any environment, and with proper training, can be utilized effectively by anyone regardless of sex.

Participants will learn basic self-defense techniques from Steve Sohn Krav Maga Muay Thai Fitness Training Center and hear a presentation from Officer Dandrea of the Greenburgh Police department. He will be giving tips on how to stay situationally aware to avoid dangerous situations and instructing participants on the proper ways to react if they do find themselves in danger.

Westchester Swimming and Diving Championships

Swimmers and divers from all over Westchester County are invited to compete for top honors during the 90th annual Westchester County Swimming and Diving Championships, which will take place in July and August.

The events are sponsored by Westchester County Parks and the Westchester County Swimming Association.

The diving competition is slated for Monday and Tuesday, July 27 and 28, beginning at 2 p.m. each day, at Lake Isle if they can.

As someone who has practiced self-defense, I believe that this program will be very beneficial for participants of all ages and backgrounds. Learning self-defense techniques has not only enhanced my sense of security but also increased my confidence. I feel confident that I would be able to use the techniques I’ve learned to react quickly and effectively in the event of an attack. Nepal Earthquake Fundraiser
Set for July 30 in Yorktown

On Thursday, July 30, Yorktown's Temple Beth Am will be holding a fundraiser for Nepal. Have a fantastic meal, socialize with your Westchester community, learn about a beautiful country, and most importantly help rebuild what has been broken.

This is a unique opportunity to make a difference. Geljen Nuru Sherpa, owner of Jewel of Himalaya restaurant, and Temple Beth Am have joined together to help those in the remote villages of Nepal. By working with nonprofit organizations who are dealing with the villages directly, we can bring relief to those who need it the most.

Nuru is also going to Nepal where he will be working with the many villages personally.

The dinner, which will also feature music and a presentation, will be at held Temple Beth Am, located at 108 Church Place in Yorktown Heights at 6 p.m. It is $40 per person and $15 for each middle school or high school student. Guests may also bring a dessert. To register by July 24, visit www.templebetham-ny.org and click on the Nepal flyer. Josephine Borsellino

To celebrate a life well lived is a gift. To say goodbye is a challenge for those left behind. Josephine Borsellino was reunited with the love of her life, Joseph, on July 14th while surrounded and comforted by her family. Family matriarch, a business woman before her time working for CNA Insurance, and role model who set high standards for those who were up to the challenge. All these attributes, combined with world famous eggplant parmigiana, just scratch at the surface of a life fulfilled.

Born in West Harrison on October 20, 1931 to Nimpa and Peter Marsala, she was one of eight children. She married Joseph on October 9,1949 and resided in Silver Lake, Valhalla, and Somers. “Aunt Jo” is survived by her two children, Benny, Ann and her partner Karen. Her niece Maryann and Fred DeSanto and nephew Dominic and Fran DeSanto and their children Olivia and Julia, nephew Joe and Michelle DeCarlo, nephew Frank Diano and Terry Jo along with their children and nephew William. Besides her husband, she was predeceased by all her siblings and her nieces Clara DeCarlo and Angie Diano.
All Sorts of Things Can Hang from the Ceiling, But Carefully Please

As to me, it was a LMAO kind of story that may get lost in translation when cleaned up, but I’m assured first hand it’s true.

A woman who owned a condo was in bed for the very first time with a new boyfriend when suddenly the Tiffany-style light fixture fell from its ceiling, hitting the guy, this time in the hand. What are the chances?

In the case of the bedroom ceiling fan, the action of the fan had loosened the screws that held it to its ceiling box. When the kitchen fixture fell, it seems that the holding box was defective.

When the couple decided it was time to buy another dwelling, this time a single-family home, the one they selected didn’t offer a single chandelier as an amenity.

My wife Margaret and I have had our own experience with falling missiles from the ceiling when her mother had her 50th wedding anniversary, and it affected us for the rest of our lives. We were in the ballroom where the event took place and Margaret was seated on a raised dais with the family. Without warning, a large, recessed high hat fixture almost directly above her head plummed down and landed on the table between her and her uncle with a horrible, ear-splitting crash. It certainly did put a damper on the evening.

Ever since that time, wherever we go together, we look above and see if we are seated under any kind of fixture and, if we are, we either move if we can or make a mental notation just in case we have to make a dash for it. It’s neurotic, I know, or is it?

For the less threatening creative things that we can hang from our ceilings at home (just think you don’t have to dust under such things), make sure that you’re securing them properly.

To hang things securely, always check your walls and ceiling for electrical wires or pipes that can be damaged by drilling and can cost you money in repairs.

There are two basic types of mechanisms to secure objects safely to a ceiling or wall. A plaster anchor is an insert designed for hanging objects from walls, either plaster or drywall, by using pressure to keep the screw in place. To install, you simply drill a hole into the wall based on the size of the anchor and push the anchor into the hole.

Next, you take a screw and drill it into the hole in the anchor, allowing it to protrude slightly to hang your desired object. Plastic anchors are effective because they expand once inside the wall and hold everything in place with pressure.

A toggle/snap bolt is used to hang objects from plaster/drywall safely using pressure. The bolt works by having two spring-loaded arms that go onto the screw. After drilling a hole where you want the bolt to go, you slide it in, and once inside, the arms will spring open and allow you to pull on the screw. You then take a screwdriver or drill gun and tighten the bolt until it locks in place.

Once you have a secure anchor in place, the sky’s the limit in how creatively you can approach hanging either utilitarian fixtures or art. Typically we go for lighting fixtures or plants, tapestries, mobiles, statues or mirrors attached directly to the ceiling. I remember once visiting a home where the owner was a stained glass artist and there were pieces of her work hung in front of most of her windows. Or, about how about statury, perhaps supported by more than one wire?

Having had my home and office shrouded in crystal, it was suggested that I hang crystals from certain corners in both. Margaret would have none of it at home, but I did sneak one, now hanging from the ceiling of my office, concealed by an apron facing into my great room. I suppose I’m basted here by the revelation, but good sport that she is, Margaret has always let me get away with little things she might not agree with. I make up for it where I can, like bringing home and arranging that weekly bouquet of fresh flowers, romantic devil that I am.

The Economics of Producing and Selling One Bottle of Wine

As I wandered down the aisles of one of my favorite wine shops last week, I found myself lingering in the California’s Napa Valley Cabernet Sauvignon section. These wines have been off my radar screen lately. Comparatively speaking, they are generally higher-priced than wines from a number of other wine regions. A quality representation may be priced in the mid-$30 range or higher.

I picked up two past favorites, one priced at $30 and the other at $75. I mulled in my mind the distinction between the wines and the disparity in price. It brought to mind an analysis I conducted a few years ago on the costs and profit margins inherent in these particular wines.

The question: what are the components of the retail price of Napa Valley wine? Why do these wines command such high process in general? Why do wines from neighboring vineyards vary so greatly in price?

The analysis: I broke down the cost and pricing model into four distinct components, generalizing a number of the underlying elements.

1. From the vineyard to the door of the winemaking facility. First, the capital investment (highest land values in the country, winery construction, vine, trellises, irrigation, depreciation, interest, lost opportunity cost of non-productive vineyards for three to five years). COST: per bottle: $2.50. Second, maintaining the crop (fertilizers, pest control, cultivation, pruning, harvesting the grapes). COST per bottle: $1.25. A total cost of $3.75 before the winemaker begins to weave his or her magic.

2. From the winery doors to the doorstep of the winery’s marketing office. First, the winemaking process (crushing, fermenting, time spent on alchemy, aging in oak barrels, storing, taxes). COST: $1. Second, packaging (bottle, cork, foil, label, boxing) and bottling. COST: $2.25. Total cost: $3.25.

3. From the marketing office door to the loading dock. Most wineries operate staffed tasting rooms to ply a portion of their wines directly to consumers. A few sell directly to consumers through mail orders and travel across the country promoting their wines to restaurants and at tastings. A few even advertise in the print media. COST: $4.50. The total cost to a winery is about $11.50.

Now add a 10 to 20 percent profit for the winery – $1.50 to $2.30 – and the selling price to a wholesaler is $13 to $14.

4. From the loading dock to the retail shelf. To gain the widest distribution, many producers solicit wholesalers to market their wines, who then sell them onward to retail shops and restaurants. A markup may range from 100 percent to more than 400 percent. In our example, the $13 bottle ultimately wends its way to the retail shelf for $26. The bottom line? The $30 bottle has a cost basis of $11.50, yielding a rather tidy profit in the supply chain – except at the winery level. There, 90 percent of the effort results in 10 percent of the profit.

The price elasticity of supply and demand does not always follow a logical path. My $75 bottle of wine may have a higher cost basis (premium land, more expensive winemaking steps), but the incremental retail pricing tends to be geometric, not arithmetic. The winery commands the same 10 to 20 percent profit; the remainder goes to the wholesaler and/or retailer.

There are notable exceptions to the standard markup guidelines. Fine wines such as Napa Valley’s Screaming Eagle have been dubbed “cult wines,” prestige in-demand wines of distinguished pedigree. Cost to produce? About $18. Price to consumers? $750. That’s almost 40 times the cost, but that’s not the final point of elasticity. An aftermarket of collectors’ demand has been spawned. The high-end auction price? A whopping $1,500.

Winemaking is more a passion than a business, but external forces influence the ultimate value of a wine in a free market. And that is the final definition that has catapulted Napa Valley winemakers to lofty levels. And their distributors and retailers are firmly attached to their coattails.

Elmsford Indian Restaurant Introduces New Owners, Chef

By Jerry Eimbinder

Ashok Salian and his wife, Priya Kapoor-Salian, are the new owners of the Indian restaurant RaaSa in Elmsford. They are joined by their executive chef Peter Beck. RaaSa held a soft opening in March and a grand opening in late May.

The husband-and-wife team met Beck when all three worked at Tamarind Tribeca, a renowned Indian restaurant in Manhattan. During Beck's long reign as executive chef at the establishment, a New York Times reviewer called it “one of the best things to happen to Indian food.”

The East Main Street space that the Saliens now operate their restaurant from was previously occupied by Malabar Hill, which went out of business in early 2013 after having served traditional Indian food for more than 20 years. The property underwent extensive renovation and last July attracted a new Indian restaurant with the name Raasa, but with many of Malabar Hill's dishes on the menu.

Months later, Salian and his wife bought Raasa and decided to keep the same name for the restaurant except for one slight change: Raasa became RaaSa. (The word translates to an essence.)

A new menu was adapted with tandoori and seafood dishes including selections from the southern and northern regions of India, plus modern contemporary dishes. A tasting menu will be introduced shortly.

Three-course, prix-fixe meals are offered at lunchtime and an unlimited salad bar is accompanied by soup and non-vegetarian and vegetarian appetizers (including kebabs that change daily), plus an entree, sides and dessert. Prices range from $12 to $20 depending on the entrée chosen. RaaSa does not offer a buffet lunch.

Ashok Salian comes from a family with a long history in the restaurant business. He graduated from the Kohinoor College of Hotel & Tourism Management Studies in Mumbai and worked for 18 months at that city's JW Marriott Hotel after earning his diploma. He met his future wife when both were employed by the JW Marriott Phoenix Desert Ridge Resort & Spa in Arizona. Later, both were members of the team that opened the Tamarind Tribeca restaurant in Manhattan.

“I always dreamed of opening a restaurant in Westchester County, said Priya, a hotel and restaurant management culinary school graduate who grew up in Chappaqua. She is in charge of the front of the house and the catering operations.

Beck was born in New Delhi. He began his cooking career at Bombay's Centaur Hotel where he advanced to sous chef. Subsequently, he cooked and occasionally trained local cooks at restaurants in Thailand, the Philippines, Hong Kong, Singapore and England.

He came to America in 1994 and was recognized for his interpretation of the late Raji Jallepalli-Reiss's fare. While cooking at Tamarind Tribeca, he received a Chef of 2002 Award from the James Beard Foundation. He also worked at Benares, an Indian restaurant in Manhattan.

Among Beck's more unique and creative dishes are Ammiya Tikki (seasoned roasted beets stuffed with mango relish); Makai Dhangri (corn, mushrooms, panner and sun-dried tomatoes wrapped in a pastry); and Chennai Jhinga (shrimp in coconut sauce over rice lentil pancake). Seafood lovers should try Tawa Machli (Branzini), Cochin Kekda (jumbo lump crabmeat) or Chilean sea bass.

RaaSa is open for lunch seven days a week from 12 to 3 p.m. Monday through Saturday dinner is served from 5 to 10 p.m. and on Sunday from 5 to 9:30 p.m.

The restaurant is located at 145 E. Main Street in Elmsford. A parking lot and on-street parking (with no meters) is available. For more information, call 914-347-7890 or visit www.raasany.com.

Enjoy Veal Osso Buco With Background Music at Rini’s

By Jerry Eimbinder

Veal osso buco is a traditional Italian dish – tender shanks of veal with vegetables. Osso buco is Italian for “bone with a hole.”

It is served in its natural juices at Leo Cattarini’s Rini’s Restaurant & Wine Bar in Elmsford and is a great choice for dinner at $26.95 when Butch Barbella and The Streets of a Bronx Band, performs on Friday, July 31 at 8 p.m.

“We normally serve veal osso buco over rice,” Cattarini said, “but we can substitute pasta.”

The menu also includes sweet potato gnocchi papalina with prosciutto, peas, onions and cream sauce ($17.95); single and two lobsters stuffed with crabmeat ($45.95).

Barbella, The Streets of a Bronx Band leader and double keyboard player, and drummer Bobby Rusticiare are Yonkers residents while Jerry Brown, lead singer and percussionist, lives in New Rochelle.

Barbella started out as a music director and composer and wrote the original music for Robert De Niro’s 1993 film "A Bronx Tale.” He was the music director for The Duprees, the Earls and Dion. He also wrote the original music for "The Dukes,” a 2008 movie about a once-famous band struggling to cope with changing times.

Barbella has been called Butch since birth. On his first day in school, his teacher called Butch’s mother and asked for his real name. “That’s the only name he’s ever been called,” the teacher was told.

August events at Rini’s will include vocalists Bobby James and Mike D’Amore at 8 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 1; the Tony T. Jazz Masters Quartet with singer Louis Vanaria at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 7; and Jeannie Claire with Larry Passiatore on keyboard and vocalist Bobby “Baby” Walker at 8 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 14. There is no cover charge for entertainment with dinner.

Rini’s Restaurant & Wine Bar is open for lunch and dinner seven days a week. It is located at 12 Main St. in Elmsford and has a parking lot. For more information, call 914-592-6799 or visit www.rinisrestaurant.com.

White Plains Recreation Men’s Softball Heats Up

By Albert Coqueran

As the heat index rises and the competition heats up at the mid-point of the season in the White Plains Recreation Department Summer Softball Leagues, let’s not forget the true objective of this popular adult recreational activity.

The most descriptive word in the title “White Plains Recreation Softball Leagues” is “Recreation.” The White Plains Recreation Softball Leagues are probably the most entertaining, exciting and competitive organized athletic activity for adults during the summer months in White Plains. Furthermore, the White Plains Recreation Softball Leagues has a history and tradition which dates back over 50 years.

This year the White Plains Recreation Department organized three Men’s Softball Leagues, which consists of 34 teams, two Co-Ed Leagues with a total of 20 teams and a Women’s Softball League with eight teams. Most of the teams are supported by local area sponsors that extend the opportunity for male and female adults to compete playing softball in a fun fashion, after their workday ends.

On Thursday, July 18, in the Men’s Thursday Night League, Riemans Auto Body challenged Plus 40 in a rematch of last year’s Playoff Championship. Riemans is the reigning Men’s Thursday Night League Playoff Champions.

Whenever Riemans plays Plus 40 fans can always expect a very competitive and highly spirited game. Both teams are longstanding members of the White Plains Recreation Men’s Softball League and each year they rate among the top four teams in the league.

Nonetheless, an incident that occurred in the top of the fifth inning of Thursday’s Night game on July 18 was a bit more than spirited and no less than controversial and had the potential to evolve into a dangerous situation.

In the fourth inning, after Riemans’ pitcher Tommy Zeoli hit his second homerun of the game and leftfielder Kevin Murray followed-up with a solo back-to-back dinger, Riemans was running away with the game with a lead of 13-3. Plus 40 scored once in the bottom half of the fourth, which made the score 13-4.

Parente, in my opinion, had no intention of hurting Delligge. However, considering the blowout score with Riemans leading 15-4, and the fact that once Delligge complained about the dangerous back-to-the-box hit and did not immediately receive a sportsmanship apology from Parente, things almost got out of control.

The umpires separated the teams who were in the midst of vehemently arguing fair play and instituted a firm warning to both clubs to play softball only and then the game continued.

But when Parente returned to the plate in the sixth inning, he hit a hard grounder which crossed the mound on Delligge’s right side and then things got even more heated on the field.

Plus 40’s longtime Manager Joseph Pinto had enough and used some choice words towards Parente, which got him tossed from the game.

Delligge, with his knee already bandaged on the mound, was furious, as were both ball clubs. Delligge, a wise veteran of almost over 40 years in the league, made a wise decision and purposely walked-in Riemans next run, making the score 17-6. This gave the Auto Body team an 11-run lead and the Mercy Rule was applied, which ended the game with Riemans getting the win.

“That is why we ended the game the way we did, we were not going to allow our players to get hurt. It is recreation ball, we have fun, we come here to enjoy ourselves, we all have to work,” said Pinto. ”I am going to call Frank (Magaletta) in the morning, it is nothing against any of these guys, these are all good guys, I have played ball with them for years, it just is what it is,” said Pinto.

Frank Magaletta is the White Plains Recreation Department’s Supervisor II, who organizes and supervises the White Plains Recreation Softball Leagues. Magaletta certainly deserves a telephone call concerning this incident.

Plus 40 longtime pitcher Mike Delligge was the losing pitcher when Riemans won 17-6 on Thursday in the White Plains Men’s Softball League. A heated controversy ensued when Delligge was nearly injured by a hard line drive hit back to the mound in the game.

Zeoli, as Delligge or any male or female pitcher in the White Plains Recreation Softball Leagues should not have to face even the chance of injury by balls hit back-to-the-mound. Maybe all the pitchers should be made to wear helmets or maybe a batting practice pitcher’s cage installed in games with a one-base rule if you hit the cage on a hit.

Myself, I do not know the solution to this problem, but what I do know is that you cannot ask a batter to avoid hitting the ball up the middle when at the plate. It would leave the batter at a disadvantage and ruin the other true objective of the game, which is “competition.”

Liberty Center Tina Charles Voted a Starter on the 2015 WNBA All Star Team

By Albert Coqueran

New York Liberty center Tina Charles has been voted a starter on the 2015 WNBA All Star Team. Charles’ selection marks the second time she was voted a starter and her fourth consecutive appearance on the WNBA All Star Team.

Charles has been voted an All Star every year (2011, 2013, 2014 and 2015) throughout her WNBA Career. In 2012, due to the scheduling of the Olympics, the WNBA did not have an All Star Team but Charles was selected as the WNBA Most Valuable Player that year.

Charles being selected a starter on the WNBA All Star Team could not have come at a better time for the Liberty. The Ladies of Liberty notched their third straight win against the Phoenix Mercury, 75-73, on Saturday, July 18, which marked their 10th victory of the season. The Liberty (10-5) is in first place in the WNBA Eastern Conference, while recording their best season start since 2001.

The performance by Charles in the last six games is a major reason for the Liberty’s recent success in the standings.

The Liberty’s 6’4” center has stepped up her game on the court since scoring 26 points against the Chicago Sky on June 30. Charles has averaged 20 points per game since then, including securing her sixth double-double of the season with 18 points and 14 rebounds against the Mercury. Charles is presently averaging... continued on page 15 16.5 points and 9.3 rebounds a game this season.

Also contributing to the recent success of the Liberty is the addition of guard Epiphanny Prince who has averaged 13 points and three assists per game since joining the Liberty on July 9. Prince was acquired in a trade with the Sky for Cappie Pondexter in the offseason but needed to fulfill her commitment with the Russian National Team before joining the Liberty.

The Liberty's balance offensive attack is another reason why they have surged in the WNBA standings. Except for the Liberty victory over the Connecticut Sun, on July 16, the Liberty has had four players in double-digit scoring in their last five of six games.

The Liberty's balance scoring attack has boosted the averages of Sugar Rodgers (9.7 ppg.), Tanisha Wright (7.9 ppg.), Brittney Boyd (7.7 ppg.), Essence Carson (7.0 ppg.) and Carolyn Swords (6.7 ppg.) who have all contributed to the Liberty's 10-5 record and best season start since 2001.

The 2015 WNBA All Star Game presented by Boost Mobile will be played on Saturday, July 25, at 3:30 p.m. at the Mohegan Sun Arena, in Uncasville, Conn.
